And of course, throughout this 500 years there were "wars and rumors of wars": crises and tidings of impending doom, contrived by numerous power-mad Little Men, reigning or ruling with or without the consent of their fellowmen, as King, Lord Protector, Prime Minister, Chancellor, Reichsfuehrer, Dictator, Generalissimo, President and Indispensable Man.

All soon to be forgotten in the shining light of those everlasting personalities, such as Moses, the great law giver; Jesus Christ, the humble Christian; Washington, the modest saviour of the New World, and Mahatma Gandhi, who proved that freedom can be won without war.

While the power-mad Little Men have all gone—we hope—to their just deserts they have left behind a new secret army of our most insidious enemies—the tax collectors.

The biblical extortioner of the "poore wyddowe's myte" was magnanimous compared to the suave, artful Machiavellian of this age, who bores like a termite, many times, into every segment of industrial and social life.

O for a "David" to slay this arch-enemy before he and his tribe suckle the life-breath of our Industrial Freedom.

The Great Adventure

Oh England, Mother Country of us all! Why did your leaders emasculate your sons and daughters beckoned by religious freedom? Your innumerable encounters with all European races, Romans, Danes, and Scots: cruelties inflicted, by self-appointed rulers, upon high and low who crossed their paths: fanaticisms and religious plagues to suit the immoralities of your ungodlike rulers: all these oppressed your worthy sons while accomplishing little to bring about the elevation of mankind.

Fortunately, there were a few, yes, many, who opposing the age-old doctrine of 'Divine Right of Kings,' in the belief that Right, not Might, should be the law of England, brought about the Reformation. These Commonwealth followers were men of determination and power. They hedged their homes with safeguards. They beheaded Charles I. Cromwell became Dictator. The House of Commons ruled for a short interval.

Now among these liberty seeking individuals were the consanguineous relatives of the Attwater Clan—men of courage, intellect and substance—who had fought a War of Words as good men should, for what they believed was for the betterment of their fellowmen. Realizing that Charles I was ignoring Parliament and despairing of success in winning peace and freedom of worship for themselves and their posterity, they, after thought, long and prayerful, decided to embark on the 'Great Adventure.' They would create a social structure of their own. They would venture into the unknown dangers of a strange land, with strange beings, in the 'New World.'

Authenticated records show our name—in various forms—appearing in only about one-quarter of the English Boroughs, Villages and Hundreds.

In his General History of Connecticut, William R. Cutter says: "The surname Attwater belongs to a large class of English family names where the personal name of a man qualified for identification by a description of his home, 'at-the-hill,' etc., became fixed as a surname on his descendants . . . like the preposition 'de' dropped from another class of names."

"The earliest mention of the name Attwater found in England appears in the chartulary of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, Godfried atte Water, of Elywarton, in the Parish of Stone, near Faversham, County of Kent, before A.D. 1367."

"The old coat of arms of Attwater: sable on a fesse wavy argent between three awanz of the second two bars navy azure. Crest: a demi-talbot argent in the month of an arron gules."

It is evident that the following records had not been called to Mr. Cutter's attention at the time he wrote his history. For in Brayley's Topographical History of Surrey, there is a most interesting item bearing on the possibility of our original name: "Manor of West Clandons In 1278, the 6th of Edward I., John De Agua or John Attewater seems to have claimed for land he held at Clandon the right and privileges of ancient demesne and without success." (This could have been land attached to a manor house for his forebears' personal use. It was during the reign of the House of Plantagenet.)

"The same person, however, on trial at Guildford against a writ of quo warranto, established the right for himself and his men of Clandon to buy and sell in Guilford market without paying tolls.

"At the same time John Atte water was summoned to answer the charge of having seized and imprisoned Robert Le Ken at Clandon Regis; in answer to which he pleaded the complainant was his villain, and the question was decided in his favor."

It is also stated that on the Rolls of Parliament, during A.D. 1290, in Vol. I, Fol. 62, can be found the following:

"Robert Attwater, with his wife Isabella, brings an Assize of Novel Disseizin, . . . touching tenements in Rotherbethe." The above mentioned property was located on the south bank of the Thames, two and one-quarter miles south-east from St. Paul's Church, London.

Another interesting notation associated with our family name and also establishing the family relationship with "Ickford," is found in a folio published in the 16th Century and called Nomina Villarum. This volume contained the names of Cities, Boroughs, Villages, and Hundreds, including therewith the lords of all the manors throughout all the counties of England from the year 1316 to 1559, including:

"Johannes Atte Water certified pursuant to writ tested at Clipston, 5 March, 1316, as one of the Lords of the Township of Ickford, in the county of Bucks."

We also find in the History of Buckinghamshire, Vol. I, the following interesting Attwater references:

"Ickford, Hickford, Iksford (in Saxon, Teenzaford, from a watery way of passage through the Thames.)

"Robert Earl, of Morton, half-brother of William, The Conqueror (1066-1087, A.D.) granted this manor, with Marsh, to the Abbey of Grestein, founded by Harlewin de Conteville, his father, and Ickford was by the Abbot and Convent granted to a family deriving its name from this place. . . . How long Grestein Abbey continued to enjoy the estate in Ickford is unknown, but having been seized by the Crown during the Wars of Edward II, (deposed by Parliament January 7, 1327) and again restored, it was a second time forfeited and family of Ickford is no longer mentioned, unless their descendants are to be identified with persons denominated Atte Water de Ickford, who afterward possessed a considerable estate here."

"William Atte Water de Ickford died in 1311, seized of the Manor of Great Ickford held of the King in capite, and in 1325 Nicholas Ryhall, Person of Ickford, passed lands in Great Ickford, with pasture of six oxen and six cows, by fine, to John Atte Water, and Joan his wife, and their heirs."

And to continue this continuity, there is the following item in the History of Herts.' "Parish of Thorley, Diocese of London, William Att Water, clerk, instituted 6th May, 1333. Thomas Thorpe, instituted 24th September, 1393, upon death of William Att Water."

Our most illustrious and outstanding English forebear (if he was actually kindred to our branch) is named in Hutchinson's History of Dorset, Vol. II, page 351:

"William Attwater was born at Dennington, in Somersetshire and was a fellow of Magdalene College, Oxford in 1492. From 1497 to 1502 he was Vice-Chancellor of that University, and on the death of Cardinal Moreton, he, for a short time, executed the office of Chancellor. After several lesser preferments he was, in 1502, Dean of King's Chapel; in 1506, Chancellor of Lincoln; in 1509, Dean of Salisbury, and in 1514, Archdeacon of Huntingdon. By the interest of Cardinal Woolsey, he succeeded him in the Bishopric of Lincoln and was consecrated November 12, 1514. He died February 4, 1520, aged 81, at his place at Woburn, County of Bucks, in the church of which his bowels were buried, and his body in his Cathedral."

The manor of Royton, parish of Lenham, was sold during the reign of Henry VIII (1509 to 1547 A.D.) to "Robert Attwater, who leaving two daughters and co-heirs, Mary the youngest carried it with other estates at Charing and elsewhere in the neighborhood to Robert Honywood, Esq., of Henewood, in Postling. He afterward resided at Pett, in Charing, being part of his wife's inheritance, and dying in 1576, was buried in Lenham Church.

"He left numerous issue by his wife, who survived him nearly forty-four years, when she dying in 1620, in the ninety-third year of her age, was interred near him, though a monument to her memory was erected at Mark's Hall, in Essex. She had, as it is said, at her decease, lawfully descended from her 367 children: 16 of her own; 114 grandchildren, 228 of the third generation and 9 in the fourth.

"The manor of Downe Court, in the parish of Lenham: Robert Attwater, of Royton, in this parish, died, possessed of it in 1565, whose daughter and co-heir, Mary, carried it, with other estates in this parish and neighborhood, in marriage to Robert Honywood, Esq., of Postling."

Elias Edward Atwater, our outstanding historian, with the assistance of Robert Henry Atwater, worked out an Atwater family tree covering the immediate forbears of Joshua and David.

Recognizing the care, accuracy and integrity of the aforementioned compilers, we must conclude that many of the family references discovered by them were akin to our branch but not necessarily in direct line.

So in this manner we come upon the will of Thomas Attwater, proved October 5th, 1484, see Archdeaconry Court, Canterbury, Book 3, p. 23. There were two sons but only John, who married Maryan, had issue. Of these four only Robert, the elder, whose will is recorded in Book 15, p. 6, carried the line through his son Thomas to Christopher whose will is recorded in Book 42, page 22. Christopher had four sons and a daughter, Joanna, who married Stephen Cooke. Their children brought in the Atwood and Best families. But we are only concerned with John Attwater, who married Susan Narsin.

Of this union, there were three children—Joshua, Ann and David, who were to be the first Attwaters to land in and assist in a very important part of colonizing a portion of the New World. Father John neglected to leave a will—dying in October 1636. Susan, mother of Joshua, had him appointed to administer the estate.

Three months later, Susan died during January of 1637. She was buried next to John in the Lenham Church yard.

Burrialls

"Nov. 1 (1636) John Attewatter, pater familias.

"Jan. 9 (1637) Susan Attewatter, Wid."

The register also shows Marriages and Christenings. Under the latter heading during the period from 'Michaelmas, 1610, unto Michaelmas, 1611' there is the following entry:

"June 2, Josuae, the sonne of John Attwater,

"George Hudson, Vicar

"Thomas Heriman

Churchwardens."

"William At-Water

The administration papers indicate that Josuae, at the age of twenty-six was a 'Mercer' in Ashford, a market town near Lenham.

Now, these, our direct ancestors, Joshua, David and Ann Attwater, embarked on 'The Great Adventure,' Beginning with that unpredictable, long and treacherous ocean voyage, of many weeks, to eventually found a different habit in the 'New World,' which would be temporarily referred to as the 'Republic of Newhauen.'

There is much speculation but no authentic data as to why and how our Attwater ancestors joined up with the Davenport-Eaton Expedition.

While their parents had passed away during the year, Joshua and David must have been part of this cabal for a considerable time. Apparently Joshua was a man of capital in his own right, while David had recently inherited several properties from an Attwater relative. So it was natural for John Davenport to seek out these young men of capital to help finance his expedition. He had recently returned from the Continent—it is said—disguised with a long beard. Be that as it may, he was a non-conformist at odds with the authorities, in which our Attwaters must have joined. Ashford was the seat of this group of non-conformists. So it is reasonable to suppose that Joshua induced his brother and many from the market town to join the expedition. It is reported that the Expedition included over two hundred men, women and children. When we realize that man flies over that same distance today in less than seven hours, the snail's pace of four months seems inconceivable.

The comfort of the Queen Elizabeth or the flying ships of today is in direct contrast with the travel hardships—not to mention the inconveniences—of that 1637 trip.

It is reasonable to suppose that Joshua Attwater and some others of means, including Theoph Eaton, Steph Goodyear, Geo. Lamberton and others, did not have their names on the manifest of the HECTOR. For it was just at this time that Charles I—who had dissolved Parliament—fearing migration of many well-to-do Englishmen, issued the following "PROCLAMATION: . . . that the King, being informed that great numbers of his subjects were yearly transported into those parts of America . . . among whom are many idle and refractory humors, whose only or principal end is to live without reach of authority—doth command his officers and ministers of the ports, not to suffer any persons, being subsidy men or their value to pass any of these plantations without a license from his Majesty's commissioners for plantations first obtained, nor any under the degree of subsidy men, without a certificate from two justices of the peace where they lived, that they have taken the oath of allegiance and supremacy, and a testimony from the minister of the parish, of their conformity to the orders and discipline of the Church of England."

Without these certificates, any escaping non-conformists might, of necessity, have to bribe the captain, even if members of the joint enterprise. From all reports, Master Fernes, of the HECTOR, was a brawler to say the least of his character. His rough treatment of some of the tourist passengers, like nineteen year old Lord Leigh, son of the Earl of Marlborough, was not unnoticed by Joshua and others. Adults paid five pounds for passage, if not members of the joint enterprise. One ton of general freight cost four pounds per passage.

But even as everything comes to an end—they finally arrived in Boston Harbor June 26, 1637.

Several town-sites in Massachusetts and New Hampshire were suggested as likely settlements. This would seem to prove that the group had no definite destination, except the New World, when they started.

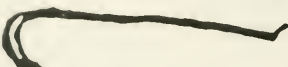

In Boston, there was talk by soldiers returning from the Pequot war of the beautiful valley and river at Quinnipiac, Quin—meaning long—nippi, to water and ohke—place. So the Indian name meant Long-water-place.

After considerable discussion, a committee consisting of Joshua Attwater, Francis Brown, John Beecher, Robert Pigg, Thomas Hogg, David Attwater and one other were appointed to investigate the territory. Neither Prudden, Eaton or Davenport were included in this first trip.

The seven spent the winter of 1637-1638 at Quinnipiac, living in mud huts. One died. As his name is reported as Beecher, we have accounted for six of the committee.

if at any time hereafter they be affrighted in their dwellings assigned by the English unto them as before, they may repair to the English plantation for shelter and that the English will then in a just cause endeavor to defend them from wrong. But in any quarrel or wars which they shall undertake or have with other Indians, upon any occasion whatsoever, they will manage their affairs by themselves without expecting any aid from the English.

And the English planters before mentioned accepting and granting according to the tenor of the premises do further of their own accord, by way of free and thankful retribution, give unto the said sachem, council, and company of the Quinnipiac Indians, twelve coats of English trucking cloth, twelve alchemy spoons, twelve hatchets, twelve hoes, two dozen of knives, twelve porringers, and four cases of French knives and scissors. All which being thankfully accepted by the aforesaid and the agreements in all points perfected, for ratification and full confirmation of the same, the sachem, his council, and sister, to these presents have set to their hand or marks the day and year above written.

MOMAUGIN		his mark
SUGCOGISIN		his mark
QUESAQUAUSH		his mark
CARROUGHOOD		his mark
WEESAUCUCK		his mark
SWACHMISHUN		her mark"

In the spring, April 1638, the entire original London group with additions under the leadership of Peter Prudden—a non-conforming minister of the Church of England—arrived at Quinnipiac from Boston.

On their first Sabbath, John Davenport conducted the religious service in the morning, Peter Prudden preached in the afternoon. This dual leadership could not last long. Prudden and Davenport could only agree to disagree. The former's followers soon purchased the territory now known as Milford.

With Prudden out of the way, Davenport proceeded to found an ecclesiastical authority in which all civil matters and court authority were vested. The entire Colony was motivated by this church authority, which in turn was governed by seven church members. Bro. Joshua Attwater was one of the members of this authority.

The first public meetings were held in the open. Finally, these were transferred to Robert Newman's barn. In the meantime, young John Brockett, a London Surveyor, staked out the Townsite. As will be noted by a perusal of the plan, a reproduction of which is included in an Atwater History for the first time, Brockett laid out nine squares for buildings, reserving 'Central Square' for public use. The streets in the Townsite included State, York, Church, Grove, George, Chapel and College.

In the meantime, Joshua Attwater and his scouting committee were anxious to complete their contract, for the purchase of the land, with the Quinnipiac Indians. The agreement was finally approved by the Church Authority and signed by Gov. Eaton and the various Indian Chiefs. The latter included:

MOMAUIGIN - SUGCOGISM - QUESAQUAUSH - CARROUGHOD - WEESAUCUCK - MONTOWESE - SAWSEUNCK and 'SHAUMPISHUM,' her mark.

As consideration, the Indians received 12 coats of English cloth, twelve alchemy spoons, twelve hatchets, twelve hoes, two dozen of knives, twelve porringers and four cases of French knives and scissors. Montowese, in his agreement, which gave him 'eleven coats of trucking cloth, and one coat of English cloth made up after the English manner,' also reserved a piece of land near the village, 'for his men which are ten, and many squaws to plant in.'

The first year was spent in erecting living quarters. All of these were constructed of hand-hewn, mortise and tenent type lumber. Later, bricks were imported from London. By 1639, Nov. 25th, the General Court was ready to order a meeting house to be erected at a cost of 500 pounds. It was fifty foot square and had a tower and turret, with banisters and rails on the top. (See seating plan in this volume, another first in Atwater Histories.)

While Theophilus Eaton was Governor, the real leader, at this time, was John Davenport, who had finally established an autocratic church-rule of the 'Republic of Newhaven.' Davenport, born in Coventry, England, in 1597, of a middle-class, old and honored family, had had a checkered career. He entered Oxford at sixteen and three years later, he was admitted to orders. Later, he became Vicar of a church in London.

Davenport, thru his non-conformist utterances and tactics, earned the displeasure of Archbishop Laud. Fearing imprisonment, he found it necessary to flee to Holland.

Now, as actual leader, of the 'most opulent colony which came into New England,' Davenport succeeded in establishing an autocratic governing class far worse in its dogmatic control—if not in its purpose—than the non-conformists had complained of at home.

The first act of the 'Seven' was to decide that the 'right of suffrage shall be conferred on church members only.' On the 22nd of August 1639, the 'Seven' had 'instituted the Church by a solemn and formal covenant one with another.' On the 25th of October, they granted the right of suffrage to 'all these that have been received into the fellowship of this Church, since the gathering of it, or who being members of approved churches, offer themselves.'

In this manner, the 'Republic of Newhauen' was organized, with the election of Theophilus Eaton, Magistrate for the term of one year. Robert Newman, Matthew Gilbert, Nathaniel Turner and Thomas Fugill were chosen Deputies 'to assist the Magistrate in all Courts called by him for the occasions of the plantation, for the term of one year.' Thomas Fugill was appointed Secretary and Robert Seeley as Marshal for the Colony.

After the 'Townsite' had been laid out by John Brockett, house lots had been given to each of 'The Planters,' according to his or her family size and the amount of taxes each one was willing to pay. In General Assembly during January of 1640, it was ordered that the land outside the 'two-mile-square,' be divided and taxed as follows: '. . . all the upland in the first division, with all the meadows in the plantation, yielding to the public treasury four pence an acre yearly, and all the land in the second division two pence an acre yearly.'

On the first day of September 1640, by order of the 'Court,' the name of the settlement was changed from Quinnipiack to New Haven. It must be remembered that this 'Church State' had been organized by a superior, Puritan culture group, with a background of literary London. It was the hey-day of Shakespeare, Spenser, Thomas Dekker and Ben Johnson. A few of the 'Separatists' had fled to Holland. The great majority stood their ground and the 'New World' gave many their chance for freedom.

A few excerpts may be of interest taken from one of my 'Atwater Library' books entitled "Records of the Colony and Plantation of New Haven, from 1633 to 1649, Transcribed and Edited in Accordance with a resolution of the General Assembly of Connecticut, By Charles J. Hoadly, State Librarian of Conn.," Published 1857.

THE FIRST YEAR AT QUINNIPIAC

"I, Thomas Stanton, being interpreter in this treaty, do hereby profess in the presence of God that I have fully acquainted the Indians with the substance of every article and truly returned their answer and consent to the same, according to the tenor of the foregoing writing, the truth of which, if lawfully called, I shall readily confirm by my oath at any time.

THOMAS STANTON."

On the 11th of December, Montowese, sachem of another tribe, "in presence and with allowance and consent of Sawseunck, an Indian who came in company with him," sold to the English a tract of land lying north of that sold by Momaugin, and described as "extending about ten miles in length from north to south, eight miles easterly from the river of Quinnipiac toward the river of Connecticut and five miles westerly toward Hudson's river." Montowese, reserving a piece of land near the village which now bears his name, "for his men which are ten, and many squaws, to plant in," received "eleven coats of trucking cloth, and one coat of English cloth made up after the English manner," in payment for the territory thus alienated.

The attesting marks of Montowese and Sawseunck are as follows:—

and orderes, allready made, or wch shall be hereafter made, by lawfull authority afforesaid. And that both in yor pson and estate: and when yow shall be duely called to give yor vote or suffrage in any election, or touching any other matter, wch concerneth this common wealth, yow shall give it as in yor conscience yow shall judg may conduce to the best good of the same.' (In the handwriting of Francis Newman.)

MESSUTUNCK, alias NEPAUPUCK.

26:23:

A Generall Court 29: of Octob: 1639:

This Indian, at a hearing before 'Mr. Eaton,' had been accused of murderously shedding the blood of some of the English. 'And by his order safely kept in the stocks till he might be brought to a due tryall. And the Indian who had attempted his escape was whipped by the marshall his deputy.'

'The Quillipeck Indian Sagamour' on the following day, 'wth diurs of his Indians wth him were examined before the magistrate and the deputies for this plantatio concerning Nepaupuck. They generally accused him to haue murdered one or more of the English, and that he had cutt of some of their hands & had presented them to Sassacuse the Pequott sachem, boasting thatt he had killed them wth his owne hands.

Mewhehato a Quillipeck Indian, kinsman to the aforesaid Nepaupuck, comeing att the same time to interceed for him was examined: . . . att first he pretended ignorance, butt wth a distracted countenance, and in a trembling manner: being admonished to speake the truth he did acknowledge him guilty according to the charge the other Indians had before made.

'All the other Indians withdrawing, Nepaupuck was brought in and examined, he confessed that Nepaupuck was guilty. . . . but denied thatt he was Nepaupuck. Mewhehato . . . charged him to his face after some signes of sorrow, thatt he had assisted the Pequotts in murdering the English, this somewhat abated his speritt and boldenesse: butt Wattoone the sonne of Carrahoode a counsellor to the Quillipeck Indian sagamour comeing in, charged him more peticularly thatt he had killed Abraham Finch an English man att Weathersfield and thatt he himselfe, the said Wattoone, stood vpon the island att Weathersfield and beheld him the said Nepaupauk now present acting the murder.'

'Nepaupuck being by the concurrence of testimony convinced, he confessed he was the man namelt Nepaupuck, and boasted he was a great captaine, had murdered Abraham Finch, and had his hands in other English blood, he said he knew he must dye, and was nott afraid of itt, butt layd his neck to the milletree of the chiminey, desiring thatt his head might be cutt of, or thatt he might dye in any other manner the English should appoynt, onely he said fire was God, and God was angry wth, therefore he would not fall into his hands. After this he was retourned to the stocks and as before a watch appoynted for his safe custody.'

At 'Generall Courte' on the third day, . . . Finally, Nepaupuck, 'confessed thatt he had his hand in the murder of Abraham Finch, butt yett he said there was a Mohanke of thatt name thatt had killed more then bee. Wattoone affirmed to his face thatt he, the said Nepaupuck, did nott onely kill Abraham Finch, butt was one of them thatt killed the 3 men in the boat or shallop on Connecticut riuer and thatt there was but one Nepaupuck and this was he, and thatt same thatt tooke a childe of Mr. Swaine att Weathersfield. Then the said Nepaupuck being asked if he would nott confesse yf he deserved to dye, he answered, it is weregim.

The Court haue had such pregnant prooffe, proceeded to pass sentence vpon him according to the nature of the fact and the rule in thatt case, he thatt sheds mans blood, by man shall his blood be shed, accordingly his head was cutt off the next day and pitched vpon a pole in the markett place.'

A Court Holden 4th of December 1639.

'Roger Duburst and James Stewart are enjoined to make double restitutio to John Cockerill for five pound and seaventeene shillings wch they stole out of his chist on the Lords day in the meeting time, and they being servants to the said Cockerell, for wch aggravatio they were whipped allso.

Thomas Manchester, servant to Mr. Perry being accused by his Mar for being druncke, and for giving his Mar vncomely language for wch his Mar having given him some correctio, the court (onely) caused him to be sett in the stocks for a certaine time.

Nicholas Tanner, servant to the said Mr. Perry, for drunkennes and abusing his Mar in wordes, was whipped.'

Many servants were whipped and put in the stocks but the gentlemen, when brought before the court, received more lenient treatment.

'John Jenner accused for being drunke wth strong waters was acquitted, itt appearing to be of infirmty and occasioned by the extremty of the colde.

'Mr. Moulenor, accused of being drunke, butt nott clearly proved, was respited.

'Peter Browne licenced to bake to sell, so long as he gives no offence in itt justly.'

In the 'A Genrll Court Holden att Newha(ven) Mon 164(1)' rates were established for all 'trades and callings': 'seaven howers shall be accounted a dayes worke for a teame, if thatt whole time be dilligently improved in worke according to the nature of thatt imploymt, and the hyer for a steere by the day 9d, for a growne ox or bull 12d, for a horse or mare 16d, for cart furniture and man 6d.

Labor of all types: 'for mar . . . which require skill and strength, not above 2s in somer and 20d in winter.

'Butt others of the same trades or callings, nott allowed mar workemen, nott above 20d in sommer and 16d in winter.'

The rates are listed on pages 51 to 56 and cover all subjects, even 'Dyett for a laboring man wth lodging and washing 4s—6d by the weeke, Venison should by the English, if fatt, not above 2d—ob p pound, if leane 2d p pound, fowle a pportionable abatem to whatt was sett last yeare.

'All commodities bought and sould among the planters, and all worke wages and labor (hence forward, till some other course be settled by order,) to be payd for either in corne, as the price goeth in the plantatio, or in worke as the rates settled by the Court, or in cattell of any sort as they shall be indifferently prized, or in good march able bever according to its goodnes; and paymt to be made att the times wch shall be agreed vpon."

(29) A Genrll Court Held at Newhaven the 2 of the 1

Moneth, 1641. About Georg: Spencer.

'The 14th of February, 1641, John Wakeman a planter and member of this church acquainted the magistrates thatt a sow of his wch he had lately bought of Hen: Browning, then wth pigge, had now brought among divers living and rightly shaped pigs, one pdigious monster, wch he then brought wch him to ve veiued and considered. The monster was come to the full growth as the other piggs for ought could be discerned butt brought forth dead. Itt had no haire on the whole body, the skin was very tender, and of a reddish white collour like a childes; the head most straing, itt had but one eye in the middle of the face, and that large and open, like some blemished eye of a man; over the eye, in the bottome of the foreheade welh was like a childes, a thing of flesh grew forth and hung downe, itt was hollow and like a mans instrumt of generation. A nose, mouth and chinne deformed, butt not much vnlke a childes, the neck and eares had also such resemblance. This monster being after opened and compared wth a pig of the same farrow, there was an aparant difference in all the inwards. . . .

. . . and a strange imprssion was also upon many thatt saw the monster, (therem guided by the neare resemblance of the eye,) that one George Spencer, late servant of the said Henry Browning, had become actor in unatureall and abominable filthynes wth the saw. . . . George Spencer so suspected hath butt one eye for vse, the other hath (as itt is called) a pearle in itt, is whitish and deformed . . . the man had beene formly notorious in the plantatio for a prophane, lying, scoffing and lewd speritt, . . . att he said he had nott done itt thatt he knew off, then denied itt, . . ."

The record covers ten pages. After hearings covering a period of three days, in the Meeting House and prison, with numerous members taking part in discussing all the sordid details, 'Itt was therefore by gen consent concluded and adjudged, thatt on the 6th day next, being the 3 of Aprill, he the said Georg Spencer shall be hanged upon a gallows till he is dead, the place to be the farthest part of the feild called the Oyster-shell field.'

The day of the executio being come, George Spencer the prisoner was brought . . . in a cart: upon sight of the gallows he seemed to be much amazed and trembled, after some pause he began to speake to the youths about him, exorting them all to take warning by his example how they neglect and dispise the meanes of Grace' . . . two more pages of accusations by Spencer and denials by others, finally:

' . . . the sow being first slaine (run through wth a sworde) in his sight, he ended his course here, God opening his mouth before his death, to give him the glory of his righteousness, to the full satisfactio of all the prsent, butt in other respects leaving him a terrible example of divine justice and wrath.'

A COURT HELD ATT NEWHAVEN THE 4th OF THE 11th MONETH 1612.

'Will Harding being convicted of a great deale of base carryage and filthy dalliances wth divers yong girles, together wth his enticing and corrupting divers servants in this plantatio, haunting wth them in night meetings and jucketting, &c. was sentenced to be severly whipped and fined five pounds to Mr. Malbon, and five pounds to Will Andrews, twwhose familyes and daughters he hath so much dishonored and wronged in attempting to defile them: and presently to depart the plantatio, and not to retourne vnder the penalty of sever punishment.

A COURT HOLDEN ATT NEWHAVEN THE 11 OF THE 11 MON: 1613.

'John Laurence and Valentine, servants to Mr. Malbon, for imbezilling their mairs goods, and keeping disorderly night meetings wth Will Harding, a lewd and disorderly person, plotting wth him to carry their mairs daughter to the farmes in the night, concealing divers vncleane filthy dalliances, all welh they confessed and was whipped.

Ruth Acie, a covenant servant to Mr. Malbon, for stubbornes, lyeing, stealing fro her Mrs. and yeilding to filthy dalliance wth Will Harding was whipped.

Martha Malbon for, consenting to goe in the night to the farmes wth Will Harding to a venison feast, for stealing things fro her parents, and yeilding to filthy dalliance wth the said Will Harding, was whipped.

Jane Andrewes, for yielding to filthy dalliance with the said Harding, was whipped.

Goodm Hunt and his wife for keepinge the counccells of the said William Harding, bakeing him a pasty and plum cakes, and keeping company with him on the Lords day, and she suffering Harding to kisse her, they being only admitted to sojourn in this plantatio vpon their good behavior, was ordered to be sent out of this towne wthin one moneth after date hereof, yea in a shorter time, if any miscarriage be found in them.'

In this Puritan Culture, punishments were dealt out at a site that was known as 'WHIPPING POST HILL.' Here also were the 'Stocks' and 'Pillories' for the chastisement of those guilty of major or minor offenses against the Colony.

On page 98 of our 'New Haven Colony Records,' (1638-1649) we have the proof that 'the Colony' was independent.

'(64) Articles of Confoederatio betwixt the Platations xnder the Gouvernt of the Massacusetts, the Planations vnder the Gourmt of Newplymouth, the Plantations vnder the Gourmt of Conecticut, and the Gourmt of Newhaven wth the Plantatios in combinatio wth itt.'

In these 'articles,' covering seven pages, they are called 'The said United Colonyes.'

On page 225, we find the record confirming Joshua's interest in higher education:

'It was propownded that the free gift of corne to the college (Harvard) might be continued as it was the last yeare & it was granted.

'Mr. Atwater, the present treasurer, informed the court that he had sent from Connecticott fortie bushells of wheat foe the colledge by Goodm Codman for the last yeares gift of Newhaven, although he had not received soe much.'

In perusing the seating arrangements in the 'Meeting House,' which is reproduced on the back pages of this volume, (another first for Atwater Histories) you will note that Mrs. Gov. Eaton's name has been included with 'Old Mrs. Eaton.' This is incorrect. She is not listed on page 303 of New Haven Colony Records 1646 and it is explained as follows:

'*The following passage, from Lechfords Plaine dealing, explains why no seat is assigned for Mrs. Eaton, the Governor's wife.

'At New-haven, alias Quinapeag, where Master Davenport is Pastor, the excommunicate is held out of the meeting, at the doore, if he will heare.'" Mass. Hist. Coll. 3d series, 111, 73. Reference has already been made to Mrs. Eaton's excommunication.'

'Brother David Atwater being absent from the watch one night was ordred to pay his fine. Also defective another time, but he layeing the fault on the mr of the watch it was respitted.'

In the 1649-1662 New Haven Town Records, published by New Haven Colony Historical Society, there are many references to Joshua and David. 'Mr Atwaters ye Treasurer,' acted as administrator of a number of estates. He was also chosen 'Deputy' of the Court for a number of years. He appears as plaintiff, in a number of actions before the Court, to recover for goods and cattle sold. In more than a dozen cases, he requests permission to sell land.

At one hearing, it was ordered: 'It is ordered thatt brother Attwater (note spelling) and Robt Hill shall be exempted fro watch in their own persons, by reason of their bodyly infirmityes, yett so as to finde each of them a man to watch their roome.'

In 1646, Thomas Fugill, first secretary of the Colony, was dismissed from his office and excommunicated from the New Haven Church, for 'falsvfyng of orders and records' and thereby securing 52 acres of land to which he was not entitled.

In the list of estate (p. 93) with the names of 'Planters,' we find the following listings:

	persons - acres - 1st.div. - neck - meadow - 2nd.yearely rate.
'Joshuah Attwater'	2	300	20	4	16	64	01-11-06
'David Attwater'	1	500			24 $\frac{1}{4}$	141	1-11-14'

During one of these sessions, the Courte sentenced 'Richard fido, hath bene a false vnfaihtful servant to his Master' and also 'Thomas Meekes for stealing, receiving stollen goods, and intertaining & inviting mens servants . . . to drink strong watter' and 'conceale it,' etc.

'Therefore the sentenc of ye Court is that Thomas Meekes paye twenty pounds as a fine for these misdemenours and miscariages, and when fido and Sloper is whipped, he and his wife are to come to ye whipping post, and stand ther, putting each of them one hand into ye hole of the post whill ye other are whipped; that they may haue part of ye shame wch their sinn deserveth; and to give security for the fine, or paye it presently, and to pay the due charges of the prison.'

On the '30th of the 6th Mon: 1644' at a Genrll Court hearing: "Mr. Goodyear propounded his purchase of Mr. Farrets Lland* to the towne, butt itt was nott accepted."

"Now called Shelter Island, Mr. Goodyear . . . purchased May 18, 1644, and sold it June 9, 1651, to Thomas Middleton, Thomas Rouse, Constant Sylvester and Nathaniel Sylvester, for 1600 lbs of good, merchantable Muscovado Sugar."

"A Generall Court the 20th of November. 1648. The Governor acquainted the court wth & read a letter wch he had received from ye committee of both houses of parliament.*

"*This letter referred to in 'New Haven case stated,' and was 'for freeing the several distinct colonies of New England from molestation by the appealing of trouble-some spirits unto England, whereby they declared that they had dismissed all causes depending before them from New England, and that they advised all inhabitants to submit to their respective governments there established, and to acquiesce when their causes shall be there heard and determined.' The letter was signed by Pembroke, W. Say and Seale, Manchester, Fr. Dacre, & Warwick, Denbigh."

In my two old volumes of New Haven Colony Records—1638 to 1662—we find numerous references concerning Joshua and David. Except for her listing in the seating arrangements, there is no reference to Ann in the above records, or for that matter in any of the other histories about the Colony.

Joshua, of course, was the most outstanding of the brothers, engaging in many activities. Our efficient compilers of the past have reached the conclusion that his progeny finally died-out without issue. This confirms the well-established theory that we all stem from David. With one last item about Joshua, we will proceed to chronicle a few David stories from the records.

In the "List of Officials, Civil, Military, and Ecclesiastical of . . . New Haven Colony" compiled in 1935, for the Tercentenary, we find the following:

"ATWATER, Joshua (D. 1676) Clerk New Haven Train Band, Aug. 1642 (resigned July 1644), Treasurer, New Haven Colony."

JUDGE (New Haven), June 1652, May 1653, May 1654, (Removed to Boston)."

It is claimed that "David was the first individual to take the Freeman's Oath. We believe this refers to Newhauen. However, we do know that twenty plantors from our colony went to Hartford, in May of 1665, but "were sent home as repudiated, after they had suffered the difficulties and hazards of an uncomfortable and unsafe journey in that wet season."

In the following year—May 3, 1666—"Mr. Jones acquainted the town that Mr. Sherman was now in town . . . in pursuance of the General Assembly's order of last, to tender the Freeman's oath to our present freemen, and to as many others of the town as should orderly present themselves & be found fit. But there were only Mr. Henry Rutherford, Henry Glover, Mr. Thomas Yale, John Winston, Mr. James Russell, Ralph Lines, Francis Brown, Jeremiah Osborne and Henry Bristow took the oath, and that according to the terms of our submission."

It was during this period that New Haven Plantation united with Connecticut (Hartford) Plantation, with the definite agreement that each town should remain a capital.

Training in the Market-Place and keeping watch were two duties of all Church-Court members, unless exempt. "John Benham informed the court that he was fined by the court for neglecting to warn David Attwater to watch. It was by the secretarie that then was, entred 5s, but it was but 2s:6d. and sening diners doe remember it was but 2s:6d. the court agreed that he should paye no more."

"David Attwater entred an action against Mathias Hitchcocke, for 10 pounds wch the said Mathias Hitchcocke receaved of David Atwater, for the service of Thomas Whitehead for four years and eighte moneths, wch Mathias Hitchcocke could not performe, he not haueing a full right to dispose of the saide Thomas . . . but now the said Thomas declareth himeselfe willing to abide wch his master David Atwater, till he maye heare from his vnkell, so he maye haue just satisfaction for the time to come, so longe as he stayeth wth him. They bothe agreed before the court, that he should haue 3 pounds a yeare, meate, drinke and clothes."

"David Atwater, Richard Mansfield, is to finde each of them a man to watch at the towne in regarde of ther house lots heare."

Why the 'Courte' required owners of vacant house lots, to supply a man for watch is beyond our comprehension. This original precaution was instigated to be ready for any emergency. However, our Colonists were more fearful of the Dutch than the Indians or other catastrophe.

There was a fight with the Dutch over Stamford. "The Dutch authorities at New Amsterdam reported to their superiors in Holland that 'Rodenberg' or New Haven, contained, eleven years after it was founded, about 1,310 families. But, though affirmed of New Haven town, it must have been . . . their informant's estimate of the population of the Colony."

He died in 1692. He had out-lived most of the original planters who arrived on the Hecator in 1637. David's farm—known as Attwater East Farms—was on the west side of Quinnipiac or New Haven.

The Collegiate School

Later to be known

Yale College

On Christmas Day, in 1641, at Town Meeting, a proposal was made to establish 'schools for all, where the rudiments of knowledge might be gained, schools where learned languages might be taught; a public library; and to crown all, a college in which young might be fitted for public service in Church and State.'

Levermore states in his 'Republic of New Haven': 'Schools, public and private, which were always maintained in New Haven, probably found their prototypes and models in the collegia which existed or had existed, in the mother towns of Ashford, Coventry and London.'

As Joshua Attwater had been a successful mercer of Ashford and prominent in its affairs, it was natural for him to be the first one to propose: 'An offering of a peck of wheat or the value of same, from everyone whose heart is willing' toward assistance for 'poor scholars at Harvard College.'

Some New England historians claimed that this contribution was proposed by Joshua for 'a school for higher learning' at New Haven. In any event, we know that when he became Treasurer of the Republic, Joshua had a standing order passed at Town Meeting, requiring that such contributions be in the form of a tax.

The first school master, is said to have been Ezekill Cheever, a Latin scholar, author of 'Short Introduction To The Latin Tongue.' He resided with 'young Joshua Attwater, late of Kent, and now Treasurer of the Colony,' who looked down on the Square 'from his great mansion, where Osborn Hall now stands.' Under a court ruling Joshua was to be paid five schillings per week for housing the teacher.

Joshua's plea for a school of higher learning for the Colony finally took root. In 1647, other powerful members of the 'church-state' hierarchy joined him in the movement. It was decided the time had come for a college of their own. Later, the Colony granted eight acres of Joseph Peck's land in New Haven, to the Collegiate School provided 'if settled here and so long as it shall remain here.'

But this was the year in which a number of the more prosperous planters—including some of the Attwaters—lost a sizable stake, for that age, in the strange disappearance of one of their trading ships, 'The Phantom Ship' by Longfellow, immortalizes this episode in New Haven shipping history. (See under French Spoliation Claims.)

So it was not until 1660 that the college project received a new lease of life. This happened thru the generous action of Governor Hopkins of Connecticut. In his will, the Governor put aside a sizable amount for the establishment of a college. John Davenport was named as one of the trustees. When the union between New Haven and Connecticut became a certainty, Davenport moved, about 1670, to Boston, dissatisfied with the union and new tendencies in the Colony.

A large portion of the funds collected by Joshua Attwater and others went toward the support of the 'Collegiate School' in Branford and 'The Hopkins Grammar School' in New Haven.

It was not until 1701, when the Colonial Assembly, meeting in New Haven, passed an act, dated October 9th, establishing a college, that the 'Collegiate School' was officially recognized. This came about thru the indefatigable efforts of the Rev. James Pierpont, Pastor of the First Church of New Haven. Nine other ministers, as listed herein, joined him in the petition to the Colonial Assembly. He has, at times, been called the Founder of Yale.

The others were: 'Rev. Samuel Andrew of Milford, who for several years was a resident Fellow and Tutor at Harvard, where he gained great reputation as a scholar and as an instructor, and later became the second Rector of Yale.

Rev. Thomas Buckingham, of Saybrook, a native of Milford, educated at Hopkins School in New Haven and long recognized as one of the most able men in the Colony.

Rev. Irrail Chauncey, of Stratford, son of the second president of Harvard and at one time teacher in the Hopkins School of New Haven. A man of varied gifts, who beside his standing as a clergyman, had a high reputation for medical skill as well as general scholarship.

Rev. Samuel Mather, of Windsor, closely connected with the celebrated Mather family of Boston and exceptionally successful as a pastor.

Rev. James Noyes, of Stonington, the leading minister of the Colony, and the one usually invited to preside as Moderator at councils and other meetings of the clergy.

Rev. Abraham Pierson, of Kenilworth, son of the principal founder of Newark, N. J., who on coming to Connecticut, took a prominent place at once among the ministers of the Colony and was known as an able scholar and later became the first Rector of Yale.

Rev. Noadiah Russell, of Middletown, a native of New Haven, where his parents had been among the original settlers.

Rev. Joseph Webb, of Fairfield, where he had settled but a few years prior to 1700.

Rev. Timothy Woodbridge, of Hartford, than whom no minister in the Colony had a higher reputation for learning, for wisdom in counsel, and for public spirit, and had gained more completely the public confidence.'

At this time, New Haven was part of Connecticut. Seven of the ministers came from sections that had formed the original 'New Haven Republic.' It was natural, therefore, with the Rev. James Pierpont as leader, that New Haven was chosen, as the site for the college, by the majority. As remarked by one member of the Assembly: 'We on purpose gave your academy as low a name as we could, that it might better stand in wind and weather.'

The Trustees met at Saybrook and organized on November 11, 1701. Jacob Hemmway was the first student. The first graduate was Nathaniel Chauncey of Stratford. Eight students registered under one tutor in September of 1702.

During the next fourteen years much discord arose thru the lack of proper meeting arrangements. In the beginning, students were forced to travel to Milford to Pierson's home. And in the second rector's period, the home of Samuel Andrew had to be visited for lectures. At the last commencement held in Saybrook (1716) the only tutor resigned. Students were distributed throughout the entire Colony.

With Hartford using every means—including Legislative influence—to secure the college, the Trustees acted promptly. They ordered the erection, in New Haven, of a College Hall and Rector's house; ordered all students to report at New Haven and elected two tutors.

The first 'College' building—at the corner of Chapel and College Sts., was 170 feet long, 22 feet wide and 30 feet high. Three stories high, with a steep-roofed attic, it was built entirely of wood. It contained a 'library, with large Chapel which was also used as a dining hall, kitchen and 20 suites of rooms for students.'

Leaders in Wethersfield, Saybrook and Branford rebelled against 'Court Acts' and also against the action of the Trustees in ordering the building built in New Haven. Many of the hundreds of library books, of the Collegiate School, were distributed in homes in the above mentioned towns. The following is a report of the episodes involving the return of the library to New Haven:

"HIS HON^r the GOV^r hearing of the refusal of the Library calls together the Council to Saybrook, where they ordered Mr. Buckingham in whose house they were to deliver . . . but he refused, then after pains taken with him by perswasion to no pirpose, they bound him over to answer to the next Genl Court in 100 pound bond, and immediately ordered the Sheriff to SIEZ the BOOKS, who went according but met with such opposition that he returned again and took new orders with him to break doors and call assistance, which he did and broke the door of Mr. Buckingham's house and entered and seizd the Library and it was guarded all night and provision was made next day for the Transporting of it by Carts, but in the night the Carts were broken and confounded and oxen turned away: nevertheless they made new provision and the next day under ye Major of Ye County's Conduct, they were transported out of the Town, and some of the opposers that talked sausily were bound over to the next County Court.

"The books tho' they met with opposition by the way in that some of the bridges were broken up, yet in three days they arrived at ye Colledg at New Haven, about ye beginning of Decembr, but we found about 260 wanting: however all we had being above a 1000 VOLLUMS of choice books we fixed up in order in ye Library."

Middletown had also made a strong bid to secure the school. But Gov. Saltonstall, a firm friend of the college idea, induced the General Assembly to pass the following resolution:

'That under the present circumstances of the affairs of the Collegiate School, the reverend trustees be advised to proceed in that affair; and to finish the house they have built in New Haven, for the entertainment of the scholars belonging to the Collegiate School.'

As early as 1701—November 11th—a number of books were brought by each trustee to the meeting and presenting them to the group would say: 'I give these books for the founding of a college in Connecticut.'

In my Yale Genealogy, published in 1908, under a picture of Elihu Yale, is the caption—(FOUNDER OF YALE UNIVERSITY). Now let us review the facts to ascertain the truth or absurdity of this claim.

The Collegiate School had been in existence for many years before Elihu Yale made any response to the numerous requests that had been made for his assistance. As an Atwater descendant, you should know that Elihu was the third child of David Yale, one of the original planters of the New Haven Colony.

Apparently, David Yale must have considered the 'Church-State hierarchy' in New Haven not to his liking, as we find him established in Boston as early 1641. And there is no doubt about his civil and religious difficulties in the home of the 'bean and the cod.' Not being in sympathy with local laws, nor religious dogma of the colonists, David took personal action, as a member of the established Church of England. Inducing six others to join him, a revolutionary petition was presented to the General Court of Massachusetts Bay. The appellants objected to the 'non-admission to the churches, of those who acknowledged the established religion of England, and at the non-participation of the inhabitants, who were not members of the colony church, in the management of civil affairs, as voters and office holders.'

'The authorities of Massachusetts' were not ready for such a revolutionary change. The petition's most offensive clause was a threat of appeal to the parliamentary government in England. And they were not satisfied with a carefully drawn argument but included a fine of $600, which David Yale had to pay. He returned to England in 1651. His second son, Elihu, born in Boston on April 5, 1649, returned with his mother and brother David, to England in 1652.

As a young gentleman, Elihu lived thru one of the most turbulent periods of England's checkered history. There was the rise and fall of Oliver, Cromwell's regime; the Restoration; the plague and the Great Fire. It was also the heyday of Milton, Dryden, Jeremy Taylor, Richard Baxter, George Fox and Win Penn.

The East Indian Company racket, which had been established by a grant from that notorious Elizabeth, the First, now attracted the interest of Elihu Yale. The interesting story of his reign, as Governor, for five years, at Madras, accumulating a fortune of '500,000 pagodas'; his removal from office by the Company; and numerous trials, including one for murder*;

It was thru the efforts of Jeremiah Dummer, agent in London, for Province of Massachusetts Bay and the Colony of Connecticut, that Gov. Yale became interested in the Collegiate School. During 1711, Mr. Dummer wrote the Rev. James Pierpont, the actual founder of Yale College, suggesting the possibility of securing funds from the 'former Governor of Fort St. George.'

Despite the Reverend's scholarly and persistent appeals, no progress was made with this man, who was now trying to build character, until Cotton Mather's memorable letter of the 14th of January, 1718:

'Sir,' said he, 'though you have felicities in your family, which, I pray, God continue and multiply, yet certainly, if what is forming at New Haven might wear the name of YALE COLLEGE, it would be better than a name of sons and daughters. And your munificence might easily obtain for you a commemoration and perpetuation of your valuable name, which would indeed be much better than an Egyptian pyramid.'

Those capital letters must have caught the eye of this opportunist, for within six months 'three bales or trunks of valuable goods' arrived in Boston, from Elihu Yale, to be sold for the benefit of the School. There was also a 'full-length portrait of King George I., by Kneller,' (said at present to be in the College collection): 'an escutcheon representing the royal arms, which was destroyed in the Revolution, and a large box of books.' In the invoice, some of the materials were listed as follows: '25 pieces of garlix, 13 pieces of calico, 17 pieces of worsted goods, 12 pieces of Spanish poplin, 5 pieces of plain muslin, 3 pieces of camlet, and 2 of black and white silk crepe.'

While the Yale Genealogy puts a very high value on Elihu's sole contribution to the School, most writers agree the goods sold for $560, after having been inventoried at 200 pounds.

"We were favored and honored," writes Tutor Johnson, on that bright September morning of 1718, "with the presence of his Honor Governor Saltonstall and his lady, . . . Lieutenant Governor and the whole Superior Court, a great number of reverend ministers and a great concourse of spectators. The trustees, meeting in the new building first most solemnly in the sonorous Latin periods still spread upon their records, 'named our college by the name of Yale College . . . upon which the Hon. Col. Tailer, who had been sent over by Queen Anne as Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts Bay, and who in anticipation of these festivities had made the toilsome journey from Boston, represented Governor Yale in a speech, expressing his great satisfaction.'

A profuse and 'painful' (?) letter of thanks was of course forwarded to the donor. Dummer later reported 'that the old gentleman was more than a little pleased—saying that he expressed at first some kind of concern whether it was well in him, being a churchman' (sic) 'to promote an Academy of Dissenters.'

Elihu now agreed, verbally of course, to give the College £200 sterling, per annum, as long as he lived. This was to be continued after his death. Within a month, according to Dummer, he had broken his promise. However, in 1721, Elihu Yale claimed he had sent goods to the College, valued at £100. There is no record of this shipment—if it did arrive. He left an unsigned will, containing a clause with a bequest of £500 to the College, Mr.

Dummer, despite his justifiable pleas, failed to induce the heirs to recognize it as a valid legacy.

The Yale Genealogy refers, here and there, to the Governor's marital status. While Elihu married Catharine Elford Hymers at Madras, in 1680, the Genealogy 'admits' that he also was living 'there, 'in immoral relations with a Mrs. Nicks and a Mrs. Pavia, the latter a Portuguese Jewess.' Mrs. Hymers is described as 'a copper-colored native of India.' But recent historians have placed Mrs. Hymers as English, even though they admit she might have been Portuguese and a Jewess!

There were many men, during those early years of the Collegiate School, who gave much time and substance to the success of the College project: Joshua Attwater, John Davenport, Governor Hopkins and many others. And finally, there was the Rev. James Pierpont, who influenced the Assembly, managed the Trustees, with perseverance and diplomacy, and finally brought about the action that culminated in the building in New Haven.

Rev. James Pierpont should have been recognized as the founder of Yale.

The name 'Yale College' was changed to 'Yale University' in 1887, by authority of the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut.

The Charter Oak Incident

Until about 1658 New Haven had apparently not given much thought to obtaining a charter from England, but about that time some thought was given this matter. It did not seem too urgent and as the situation in England at that time was not favorable the matter was dropped.

About 1660 the Connecticut colony, which comprised of Hartford, Windsor, and Wethersfield, felt that it was highly desirable that a charter be obtained, giving them title to the land they had settled. Consequently in July, 1661 their Governor, John Winthrop, Jr. was sent to England to attempt to obtain a charter for Connecticut. On his way he stopped at New Haven to discuss the matter with its leaders. There appears to be no record of any understanding having been reached, but there seems reason to believe that New Haven's Governor, William Leete, was in favor of having the Charter include both colonies.

Winthrop was successful in obtaining a favorable charter from King Charles II in 1662. However, when the New Haven Colony learned that it embraced both the Connecticut and New Haven colonies, much opposition was voiced and an appeal was made to the King. By late 1664 much of the opposition had been quieted and certain compromises made by both colonies so that on December 13, 1664 New Haven held its last Court, for the purpose of terminating the colony. On January 5, 1665 New Haven wrote the Connecticut Assembly declaring submission thereto and in the spring of that year four magistrates were sent to the Connecticut Assembly.

On December 20, 1686 Sir Edmond Andros arrived in Boston with a commission from the King appointing him Governor of all New England. In order to extend his governing over Connecticut he wrote several letters to the Governor of Connecticut requesting the surrender of the Connecticut Charter. The request was brought before the Assembly and it stalled on direct compliance. Finally on October 22, 1687 Andros announced that he would send or come himself to pick up the Charter. On October 26 he left Boston attended by eight members of his Council and guards and arrived in Hartford late in the afternoon of October 31 where they were met by Connecticut Governor Treat and his staff. Andros proposed that they dine first, after which they meet in the Council Chamber. He graciously invited Governor Treat, the Deputy Governor, and the Secretary of the Council to dine with him.

At the meeting after the dinner were the Connecticut Officials and twenty-four of the thirty-four elected deputies, among whom were Moses Mansfield and Abram Dickerman of New Haven. A member of Andros' party read the King's command to Andros to annex Connecticut to his government of Massachusetts. The Charter was then brought forward and handed to Governor Treat, who snipped the thong with which the Charter was tied, unrolled it, and laid it on the table. Governor Treat then made a speech setting forth what the Charter meant to Connecticut and expressed his conviction of the illegality of these proceedings. John Wadsworth of Hartford then followed with a speech backing up the remarks of the Governor. He was followed by Andros who made some tactful remarks. It is then recorded that Andrew Leete, son of William Leete, the former Governor of New Haven, got up and was in the midst of a blistering attack on the King's actions with respect to Connecticut when a sudden commotion occurred.

It is not entirely clear as to just what happened at this point. One account has it that Andrew Leete was taken suddenly ill and pitched forward onto the table upsetting the candelabra and extinguishing the candles, while another report has it that a sudden gust of wind coming in through the open window extinguished the candles. During the momentary darkness until the candles could be relighted the Charter disappeared from the table. One report states that the Charter was snatched from the table and passed to Joseph Wadsworth who was standing outside the open window, who took it to the house of Samuel Wyllys, on whose property stood a large oak tree. There was no one home but Mistress Wyllys, who suggested that the Charter be hid in a hollow of their oak tree. The Charter reposed in the tree until a safer place was found and the tree was known thereafter as the Charter Oak.

When the candles were relighted Andros saw that the Charter had disappeared and noting that no one had left the room he realized he had been tricked, but made the best of the situation and announced there seemed to be no further occasion to continue the meeting. Thus, the Connecticut Charter was saved.

Rev. Edward E. Atwater of New Haven

No. 732

It is fitting that all those who bear the Atwater family name should make the acquaintance of Edward E. (1816-1877), for each owes him a debt whether he knows it or not.

Edward Elias Atwater was a native of New Haven, Conn., where he was born May 23, 1816, the son of Elihu and Julia E. Thompson Atwater. He attended Yale, graduating in 1836, and in the following year entered the Theological Department of Yale College. He was ordained a Congregational minister in 1841, spending eight years until 1849 in Ravenna, Ohio. The following year he spent in foreign travel and, in 1852, was installed pastor of the Congregational Church in Salem Falls (Rollingsford), New Hampshire. Five years later he returned to New Haven and built up a new church in the eastern part of the city. This new congregation was organized in 1863 and he served as its pastor until 1870 for the remaining years of his active ministry.

We of the family know him best for the contributions he made of an historical and genealogical nature, mostly in the later years of his life. Beginning in 1851 he published "A Genealogical Register of the Descendants in the Male Line of David Atwater, One of the Original Planters of New Haven, Conn., to the Fifth Generation." Copies of this first edition are rare indeed. The writer is most grateful to Charles Hobart Atwater of Santa Monica, California, for an opportunity to examine his copy, which he naturally values highly. A few quotations from the prefaced "Notice" and "Introduction" will reflect the care and industry of our first family genealogist who must have begun his labors more than 200 years after the arrival of the first members of the family in America in 1637.

"The following Register has been prepared for the gratification of many of the descendants of David Atwater, who have expressed a desire to trace the line of their descent from him. Great care has been taken to make it correct: some errors, however, may possibly be found, and unquestionably there are many omissions . . .

"In regard to the orthography of the name, usage differs: some writing Atwater, and others Attwater. The men who brought the name to this country have, each with his own hand, written it upon the Public Records of the New Haven Colony—the one David Atwater and the other Joshua Atwater—in neither case using the letter "T" more than twice. Fugill, however, the first clerk of the Colony, wherever he has the occasion to write the name, uses "T" three times. If the orthographical question is carried farther back than the first introduction of the name into America, it will be found that the name was originally written Attewater, in which form it may be found in Doomsday Book, like its cognates Attewell, Attewood and some others which have now lost the prefix, as Attetownsend. Afterward the first "E" was dropped, and the name was written Attwater, as is generally if not universally written in England to this day.

"It has been found impossible to designate those branches of the family who differ from the more commonly received method of spelling, which is Atwater . . .

"Joshua Atwater and David Atwater were among the first planters of New Haven, as their autographs in the first volume of the Town Records sufficiently prove.

"Tradition says that the family of Joshua, in the male line, soon became extinct; and all researches yet made serve to confirm it. He was probably a married man at the time of his emigration, as his family is numbered as two persons in the list of planters. If this be so, he soon lost his wife, for he married Mary Blackman, the daughter of a clergyman in Stratford, May 6, 1651, by whom he had two sons and one or more daughters . . . Previous to 1665, or early in that year, he removed to Boston, as in a deed dated in that year, by which he conveyed to his brother David his house and lands in New Haven, he describes himself as 'Joshua Atwater of Boston, New England.'

"If it be true that the family of Joshua in the male line became extinct, all in America who bear the name of Atwater are descendants of David. None have yet been found who could not trace their lineage, by means of this register, to him."

This 1851 volume lists six males in the second generation, seventeen in the third, thirty-four in the fourth, and fifty-four in the fifth generations. In the 1871 revision of this document the compiler adds a few items of family history, but in a very modest way.

The Rev. Mr. Atwater visited England twice during the later years of his life, once in 1875 and again in 1887, with a purpose "to ascertain with as much exactness as possible what relation of consanguinity there was between Robert Atwater of Royton Chapel and the other Atwaters in his neighborhood. My first study was of the diocesan register at Canterbury. As my eyes ran over the list of baptisms in Lenham, my attention was arrested by the name of Anthony Thompson . . . I recognized the name as belonging to one of my ancestors . . . But what was my surprise to find . . . that the blood of the Atwaters and the Thompsons, which had become commingled in my own veins . . . had been commingled two centuries before in the veins of Anthony Thompson, whose mother was, I believe, the granddaughter of Robert Atwater of Royton Chapel."

Edward E. began the compilation of the record of descent of the Atwaters in England in the expectation that he might publish his findings, but he died before the task was well under way. It was advanced by Robert Henry Atwater of Washington, D. C. and published by Francis Atwater of New Haven.

Reverend Edward, however, wrote several volumes, one at least on a theological subject, and two valued volumes, one on the history of the New Haven Colony (1830) and the other on the History of the City of New Haven (1837). He must have had a prodigious memory and he proved a delightful companion as he made contacts with members of the family in his travels. (See Atwater History, Vol. I, Pg. 432-436, for Rev. Amzi Atwater's account of a trip in and near New Haven in 1830 with Edward E.)

This opportunity afforded to the writer to review the record of Rev. Edward E. Atwater has made him appreciate more than ever the debt which those who bear this name owe him as the first systematic compiler of the family records. It took much time and faithful research to produce the volume of 1851. Today that volume seems primitive in contrast with the latest volumes about the family like this one and those published by Francis Atwater. But such a genealogical record was not born in a day. Only patient and persevering work produced the very adequate record which we and our children now enjoy. Edward E. chose to begin his studies at a time when priceless records and memories were failing. Let us hope that in our generation there may be others with similar industry to carry on the task.

Clara Barton A Friend of the Family

The present generation of Atwaters will have little acquaintance with the esteem in which phrenologists were once held. In the period of say 1830 to 1860 they were popularly believed to possess scientific powers and to be able to prescribe the best line of endeavor for one to pursue. In an impressive manner the phrenologist would "examine" the person before him, announce his characteristics, and advise which had best be developed and which corrected.

Such a one was L. W. Fowler who, when on a visit to the home of Stephen and Sarah Barton at Oxford, Massachusetts, was asked what their daughter Clara ought to do in life, answered..

"The sensitive nature will always remain.
She will never assert herself for herself;
she will suffer wrong first. But for others she will be perfectly fearless. Throw responsibility upon her."

Fowler's advice was that she should become a school teacher.

Perhaps other children of fifteen have had expressed the manner in which their character could develop in future years but this prophesy was to be fulfilled through a lifetime of service to others that is outstanding.

Here was a woman who was destined to 'stand before Kings' and receive the honors of many countries. No American born in the 1920's can live to know as many presidents as knew her and gave her praise.

Born on Christmas Day in 1821 she was in her 60th year when the American Red Cross was formed and was 83 when she retired. A small, erect person, only five feet tall, she preserved a remarkably youthful manner until well beyond the years when many would have been saving their energy.

In Miss Barton's efforts to assist families in tracing soldiers who had been reported missing after battles in the South, she was assisted by Dorence Atwater of Terryville, Connecticut, a brother of Francis Atwater, the compiler of four volumes of Atwater History.

Dorence had enlisted in the Connecticut Cavalry at the age of sixteen, been captured and sent to Andersonville Prison. In this prison 35,000 Union soldiers had been held and 13,000 had died. Working in the prison hospital, Dorence had preserved a complete roll of the names and rank of these men and their places of burial. When Miss Barton was authorized by Congress to locate and mark the graves of Union soldiers in the South, this roll was of great value and Dorence was detailed to accompany her to Andersonville.

During this service Dorence was accused of theft of his own records from an officer, was court martialed and given a dishonorable discharge. From that time Miss Barton was his close friend and militant supporter. Through her efforts, and those of other friends, some enlisted by Miss Barton, the sentence of the court martial of 1865 was set aside more than 30 years later.

I had only one brief opportunity to meet Clara Barton: that was at the home of Francis Atwater in Meriden. She was then as close a friend of her host as she had been of his brother. Francis had served as Treasurer of the Red Cross during the Spanish-American War and had accompanied her to Havana. As near as I can recall she was then 85 or 86 years of age, in full possession of her faculties and interested in all that went on about her.

It does not take much imagination to call up one of the earliest recorded scenes in the life time of public service of Clara Barton. It is the day after the Sixth Massachusetts had been fired upon in Baltimore. Ellsworth had been killed and the regiment with its wounded had arrived in Washington.

The wounded are quartered in the old Senate Chamber and those attending them filled the seats whilst Miss Barton, from the vice-president's chair, was reading the home town newspaper aloud.

Heraldry

From the earliest times, nations, tribes, chieftains and families have adopted distinguishing symbols. The Greek and Roman heroes wore various devices on their shields. In the East, the Chinese Empire was symbolized by the five-clawed dragon; the Japanese empire by the chrysanthemum. In the New World, the Aztecs carried shields and banners adorned with symbolic devices. Totemism was another forerunner of heraldry.

It was not until the 12th century that true heraldry began in Western Europe. Kings and princes were the first to make use of personal insignia. Although earlier monarchs had adopted personal marks on seals, the first English king to use his great seal as a coat of arms on his shield was Richard I who ruled from 1189 to 1199. During the late 12th and throughout the entire 13th centuries arms appeared increasingly on shields. Within a short time most of the great houses in England and upon the Continent were displaying them.

Writers attribute the sudden emergency of heraldry at this time to the need of knights and lords for some mark of identification. When they were in full armor, they were unrecognizable. Few could read so instead of using a nameplate each man adopted a distinctive insignia, known as a "coat of arms." He displayed this on his shield, banner and horsecloth, as well as on his coat, and wore it in civil life as well. The hereditary character of heraldry owed its existence to the feudal social system in which society on its secular side was held together by personal allegiance of each man to his lord. The coat of arms became not only a symbol of the owner's identity but also his status as well.

The great increase in the number of coats of arms eventually made some kind of control necessary. By the end of the 13th century, about 1,500 arms had been adopted in England. Evidence points out that in the 14th century ownership of arms had acquired legal recognition. By the 15th century, it became the duty of the "King of Heraldry," later known as the King of Arms and also the Garter, to register the arms of noble gentlemen and still later to give patents of arms to applicants. The King of Arms or Garter was assisted by a number of heralds. The output of patents steadily increased from the reign of Henry VI to that of Elizabeth, after which there began some decline. Those to whom patents to coats of arms were issued were corporate bodies, higher ecclesiastics and all classes of new men. However, with the discontinuance of tournaments and the change in the character of war, emphasis in the use of heraldry shifted from military to civilian use. During the Tudor period, the symbolic use of arms at funeral increased while its use in war diminished. With the passing of the Tudors, heraldic art generally declined.

The English and Continentals drew upon the entire animal kingdom and garden for heraldic devices. Some of the more common were the lion, leopard, stag, wolf, eagle, falcon, the rose, fish, fleur-de-lys, swan and the ass head. Other well-known devices from other sources frequently used were the sun, crescent, mullet, escallup, shells and sheaths of grass. In certain instances the wearers selected symbols suggesting their names. Examples of these are as follows:

- The House of Griffon bore the griffin
- The House of Drake bore the fire-drake or dragon
- The Cockfields bore silver three cocks gules
- The Pelhams bore azure three pelicans silver
- The Lucys bore gules three lances (or pikes) silver
- The Herons bore azure three herons silver

The three swans, likewise, in the Atwater coat of arms, together with the wavy bars, suggest "water."

Certain customs developed in the use of the coat of arms. Those for England and Scotland differed on many points. In this discussion, we will only be concerned with the English usage. These customs were generally recognized by the King of Arms or Garter in the issuing of patents. Many of them are still observed while others have fallen into disuse. Since no two men might wear the same coat of arms simultaneously, the sons were required by custom to "difference" their father's coat by alterations. Frequently they changed the colors, added new devices to the coat, perhaps a border, or both. The first son wore a label, the second a crescent, the third a star, the fourth a bird called the "martlet," the fifth a ring, the sixth a fleur-de-lys, the seventh a rose, the eighth a certain kind of cross called a "Cross moline," and the ninth an eight-petalled flower. Upon the death of the father, the first son inherited the plain coat of arms from him and removed the label. The younger sons, however, retained their individual marks, and in turn passed them on to their descendants who also added further differences.

Women also possessed certain rights regarding their fathers' coats of arms. Daughters were allowed to use their father's coat which they depicted on a diamond-shaped "lozenge." When they married, they "impaled" their own family coat beside their husband's on his shield. If their father had no sons, they became heraldic heiresses and could place their own family shield in the middle of their husband's shield. This modified shield was called "escutcheon of pretense." Illegitimate sons were required to seek a new grant of arms from the Crown either in the form of the original coat with a special mark of difference or an entirely new coat.

Coats of arms were passed from one generation to another in the same way as land. If a man had no sons, the land and arms passed to his daughter and thence to her son. The son, however, could not use the coat inherited through his mother without "quartering" it. This took place when the shield was divided into equal "quarters" in which were placed the various coats of arms which its owner had inherited. Thus if a man had no sons and several daughters, all of his grandchildren could quarter his arms with their own father's coat. It may be seen that after several generations of marriages to heiresses, a family might have a large number of quarterings.

The general principles of quartering are still observed. Even when there are more than four coats of arms used, they are still called quarterings. Up to four quarters may be placed in each quarter of a shield. Then there are more than this number, the four quarters of the shield may become "grand quarters," one or more of them being sub-divided into lesser quarters to accommodate the extra coats. Since Tudor times, any number of new coats may be added consecutively without sub-division into fours. As a result, a shield becomes "quarterly of six" or "quarterly of ten," whatever the number of coats may be.

It does not follow that families having the same surnames are entitled to wear the same coat of arms. If one can trace blood relationship to the other, that family is entitled to a differenced version of the arms. Unrelated families, therefore, who have the same surname are given a dissimilar plain coat of arms.

The Atwater coat of arms was worn on several important State occasions in the history of England. It is first recorded as being borne by John Water, York Herald at Arms, at the funeral of King Edward IV in 1483. His arms were described as "sable, on a fesse wavy argent, between three swans of the second, two bars, wavy azure, crest a demi-talbot argent, in the mouth an arrow gules." These arms belonged to the "Atwaters of Kent," with variations of the fesse for difference. The arms with the same crest were confirmed to Robert Atwater of Kent by Clarendieux Harvey in 1564, with "the colors of the crest being transposed for difference." Robert Atwater being without male heirs, it is found that his daughter Mary, who married Robert Honywood, inherited several of her father's manors and bore his coat of arms. At the entrance of one of the Honywood manor houses, a contemporary writer in the late 16th century described the carved quarterings of the family's arms. One of these was the "Sable, wavy, bendy, of four, in fesse argent, between three swans proper, for Waters."

French Spoliation Claims

"Build me straight, O worthy Master,
Stanch and strong, a goodly vessel,
That shall laugh at all disaster,
And with wave and whirlwind wrestle."

—LONGFELLOW

Among the more progressive of those early New Haven settlers—and the Attwaters should be included in this category—were many traders. In order to satisfy the demands of the growing population and incidentally meet the superior requirements of some of the more 'Opulent' members of the Colony, it was found necessary to go far afield to meet these demands.

Ships that were built in the Colony were soon sailing the seven seas. In order to appreciate the extent of these enterprising traders, one should read the account of my direct ancestor, Jonathan, seventh son of David the First, known as 'The Merchant Prince of New England.' Jonathan traded throughout the world. His will, as outlined on pages 99 to 110, of Atwater History of 1901, proves his diversified and far-reaching contacts.

Facetiously, I have heard Atwater members say: 'In those early days, our ancestors were either ministers or rum sellers.' But to be fair to those early 'rum sellers,' one must remember that the innkeeper's occupation was considered an honorable one in New Haven's early hospitable days.

In more serious tales, we had heard of daring Attwater sea captains running the Privateer Blockades in the Carribbean. In our investigation and research covering numerous Atwater 'old wives' tales,' many of which had no foundation in fact, we remembered the French Spoliation Claims. Having received the munificent sum of $32.70 from a New Haven law firm, in the early part of the Century, as our share in these ship claims, we knew that this 'tale' was worth further investigation.

So we wrote to the National Archives and Record Service in Washington, D. C. In response to our request for authentic information, the following letter was received:

"Your letter of June 22, 1954, requested information about French Spoliation claims relating to Thomas Attwater of New Haven, Conn.

An examination of the records of the United States Court of Claims and of the Department of Justice Court of Claims Section revealed four claims in which Thomas Atwater of New Haven, Connecticut was involved: Spoliation Claims 2075, 2839, 3286 and 5339.

Claim No. 2075, filed by John C. Hollister, administrator of the Estate of Thomas Atwater, deceased, et al., concerned the schooner NEUTRALITY, of which Atwater had been part owner. The NEUTRALITY sailed from New Haven on March 29, 1800, bound for Martinique. On May 18, 1800, the ship was captured by the French privateer L'EGYPTE CONQUISE and was condemned and sold for the benefit of its captors. The conclusions of law filed in this case on April 11, 1892, found that the seizure and condemnation were illegal and that the administrator of the estate of Thomas Atwater was entitled to the sum of $1,630.12.

Claim No. 2839, filed by Elihu L. Mix, administrator of the estate of Thomas Atwater, deceased, et al., concerned the brig HULKER, of which Atwater had been a part owner. The HULKER sailed from New Haven on June 16, 1800, bound for the Island of Grenada. On July 14, 1800, the ship was seized by the French privateer BIJOU and was condemned and sold. The conclusions of law filed in this case on March 31, 1902, found that the seizure and condemnation were not illegal and that the owners therefor had no valid claims."

(Editor's Note: The italics are ours. As a student of the law over a period of many years, we have found that there are numerous legal decisions inexplicable to right-thinking minds and honest attorneys.)

"Claim No. 3286, filed by John C. Hollister, administrator of the estate of Elnathan Atwater, deceased, et al., concerned the schooner CERES, of which Thomas Atwater had been a part owner. The CERES sailed from New Haven of October 19, 1797, bound for Cape Verde Islands. In the early part of 1798, on this return trip from Cape Verde Islands, the ship was captured by a French privateer and was condemned and sold. On October 18, 1913, the court dismissed the claim for nonprosecution.

Claim No. 5339, filed by Elihu Mix, administrator of the estate of Thomas Atwater, deceased, et al., concerned the schooner NEUTRALITY, of which Atwater had been a part owner. The NEUTRALITY sailed from New Haven on or about February 19, 1799, bound for Martinique. On April 1, 1799, the ship was captured by a French privateer and was afterwards recaptured by the United States ship Constitution and carried into Martinique and proceeded against for salvage by the re-captors. On April 16, 1914, the court dismissed the claim for want of sufficient evidence."

There was considerable interesting material, to us 'Attwaters,' in the original 'Petitions,' 'Briefs,' and 'Statements of Alleged Facts.' We wish that space allowed us to reprint them all in Volume 5. However, our briefs may be of interest to show how successfully hijacking on the seas was carried on in 1800.

These covered cases and claims involving the Schooner NEUTRALITY—value $3,600. Owners—Thomas Attwater, Ebenezer Peck, Elias Shipman, Austin Denison and Elnathan Attwater. Built at Kingston, Mass., 1793, but registered at New Haven, Oct. 1st, 1793. 89 11 95 tons. With cargo valued at $7,272.

'The brig HULKER,' a duly registered vessel of the United States. Peter Clark, Master, of 114; Brig. rigged; valued at $5,700; with cargo $8,980. Owners, Thomas Attwater, Frederick, John and Jess Hunt, and Richard Cutter.

The 'CERES,' a registered vessel of the United States of 52 tons, valued with cargo at $8,800. Owners—Thomas Attwater, Elnathan Attwater and Amos White, Master.

Possibly the most interesting items disclosed in all these claims, which necessitated over one hundred years of legal effort, are in the manifests of cargo; to wit:

3400 ft. of lumber @ $16.00 per M.	$ 54.40
10 sheep and swine @ $2.00 each	20.00
27 blds. corn meal, inc. blds.	594.00
2 firkins butter 72-11-74-11 @ 25c	31.00
116 blds. flour	1,044.00
10 blds. beans, 35b-1dd-37-100	48.12 ¹ / ₂
11 blds. tobacco @ $100	1,100.00
1 tierce cheese, 415 lbs. @ 12c	49.80
46 oxen @ $40 each	1,840.00
64 blds. beef $12	768.00
29 blds. pork, $20 each	580.00
30 dozen poultry	60.00
3 horses—average	45.00
6 firkins of lard	36.00
70 turkeys	35.00
19 sheep and swine	38.00

In addition to those in my own branch—Descendants of Jonathan Attwater—which would include Margaret Attwater Preston, now of Lake Forest, Ill., and Sarah Coker's family of Petersburg, Virginia, there would be the following branches:

Ruth Caroline Attwater Roland, Rebecca S. Attwater Shaw, Mary B. Attwater Read, Elisha Attwater, Nancy R. Attwater Barnes, Thomas B. Attwater, Sarah B. Attwater Clark, Elihu L. Mix, Margaret Attwater Weed, Edward A. Mix, Henry Smith, Sarah Smith, Margaret Attwater Smith, Mrs. Catharine Attwater Lay, Junius A. Smith, David Smith, Otis S. Leroy and F. Vinton Smith.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow heard of the Phantom Ship from a Mr. S. Ward during January of 1841. The poet recalls that he made no use of the information until October 11, 1850.

"I was in the college library to-day, asking for Mather's 'Magnalia'." Dr. Harris gave it to him, remarking: "You cannot find in it what you want, for there is no index."

"Then it is of no use to me," replied the poet. But accepting the volume, Longfellow opened it at random.

"There, before my eyes, was the very thing I wanted: namely, the account of the Phantom Ship at New Haven, book 1, chapter 6. I wrote a poem on the subject in the evening."

In Mather's Magnalia Christi.
Of the old colonial time,
May be found in prose the legend
That is here set down in rhyme.

A ship sailed from New Haven,
And the keen and frosty airs,
That filled her sails at parting,
Were heavy with good men's prayers.

"O Lord! if it be thy pleasure"—
Thus prayed the old divine—
"To bury our friends in the ocean,
Take them, for they are thine!"

But Master Lamberton muttered,
And under his breath said he,
"This ship is so crank and walty,
I fear our grave she will be!"

And the ships that came from England,
When the winter months were gone,
Brought no tidings of this vessel
Nor of Master Lamberton.

This put the people to praying
That the Lord would let them hear
What in his greater wisdom
He had done with friends so dear.

And at last their prayers were answered:
 It was in the month of June,
 An hour before sunset
 Of a windy afternoon,
 When, steadily steering landward,
 A ship was seen below,
 And they knew it was Lamberton, Master,
 Who sailed so long ago,
 On she came, with a cloud of canvas,
 Right against the wind that blew,
 Until the eye could distinguish
 The faces of the crew,
 Then fell her straining topmasts,
 Hanging tangled in the shrouds,
 And her sails were loosened and lifted,
 And blown away like clouds,
 And the masts, with all their rigging,
 Fell slowly, one by one,
 And the hulk dilated and vanished,
 As a sea-mist in the sun!
 And the people who saw this marvel
 Each said unto his friend,
 That this was the mould of their vessel,
 And thus her tragic end,
 And the pastor of the village
 Gave thanks to God in prayer,
 That, to quiet their troubled spirits,
 He had sent this Ship of Air.

In the 'Preface' of Cotton Mather's 'Magnalia Christi Americana—or the Ecclesiastical History of New England,' first published in London in 1702, it states:

'The great object of the first Planters of New England was to form A CHRISTIAN COMMONWEALTH.' This litteræ humaniores was quill-driven so near to the period of New Haven settlement days, that the following citations should be of interest to all our family members:

'8.5. But there was one thing that made this colony (New Haven) very considerable; which thing remains now to be considered. The well-known Mr. Davenport and Mr. Eaton, and several eminent persons that came over to the Massachusetts-bay among some of the first planters, were strongly urged, that they would have settled in this Bay: but hearing of another Bay to the southwest of Connecticut, which might be more capable to entertain those that were to follow them, they desired their friends at Connecticut would purchase of the native proprietors for them, all the land that lay between themselves and Hudson's River, which was in part effected.

Accordingly removing thither in the year 1637, they seated themselves in a pleasant Bay, where they spread themselves along the sea-coast, and one might have been suddenly as it were surprized with the sight of such towns, as first New-Haven: then Guilford: then Milford: then Stamford: then Brainford. . . .

'All this while this fourth colony wanted the legal basis of a charter to build upon: but they did by mutual agreement form themselves, into a body-politick as like as they judged fit unto the other colonies in their neighbourhood: and as for their church-order, it was generally secundum usum Massachusettsensem, (after the Massachusetts model)

's.6. Behold, a fourth colony of New-England Christians, in a manner stolen into and a colony, indeed, constellated with many stars of the first magnitude. The colony was under the conduct of as holy, and as prudent, and as genteel persons as most that ever visited these nooks of America: and yet these too were tryed with very humbling circumstances, Being Londoners, or merchants and men of traffick and business, their design was in a manner wholly to apply themselves unto trade: but the design failing, they found their great estates sink so fast, that they must quickly do something.

'Whereupon in the year 1646, gathering together almost all the strength that was left them, they built one ship more, which they freighted for England with the best part of their tradable estates: and sundry of their eminent persons embarked themselves in her for the voyage.

'But, alas the ship was never heard of: she foundered in the sea: and in her were lost, not only the hopes of their future trade, but also the lives of several excellent persons, as well as divers manuscripts of some great men in the country, sent over for the service of the church, which are now buried in the ocean.'

Letter to ' Cotton Mather, D.D. F. R. S.

Pastor of the North Church.

Boston, New-England.

Reverend and Dear Sir:

In compliance with your desires, I now give you the relation of that apparition of a ship in the air, which I received from the most credible, judicious, and curious surviving observers of it.

In the year 1647, besides much other lading, a far more rich treasure of passengers, (five or six of which were persons of chief note and worth in New-Haven) put themselves on board a new ship, built at Rhode-Island, of about 150 tons: but so walty, that the master (Lamberton) often said she would prove their grave.

In the month of January, cutting their way through much ice, on which they were accompanied with Reverend Mr. Davenport, besides many other friends, with many fears, as well as prayers and tears, they set sail. Mr. Davenport in prayer, with observable emphasis, used these words: 'Lord, if it be thy pleasure to bury these friends in the bottom of the sea, they are thine, same them.'

The spring following, no tidings of these friends arrived with the ships from England, New-Haven's heart began to fail her: this put the godly on much prayer, both public and private, 'that the Lord would (if it was his pleasure) let them hear what he had done with their dear friends, and prepare them with suitable submission to his Holy Will.'

In June next ensuing, a great thunder-storm arose out of the north-west after which (the hemisphere being serene) about one hour before sun-set, a Ship of like dimensions with the aforesaid, with her canvas and colours abroad (though the wind northerly) appeared in the air coming up from our harbour's mouth, which lies southward from the town, seemingly with her sails filled under a fresh gale, holding her course north, and continuing under observation, sailing against the wind for the space of an hour.

"Many were drawn to behold this great work of God: yea, the very children cried out, 'There's a brave ship.'

At length, crowding up as far as there is usually water sufficient for such a vessel, and so near some of the spectators, as they imagined a man might hurl a stone on board her, her main-top seemed to be blown off, but left hanging in the shrouds; then her mizzen-top; then all her masting seemed blown away by the board: quickly after the bulk brought into a carcen, she overset, and so vanished into a smoaky cloud, which in some time dissipated, leaving, as everywhere else, a clear air.

The admiring spectators could distinguish the several colours of each part, the principal rigging, and such proportions, as caused not only the generality of persons to say: 'This was the mould of their ship and thus was her tragick end.'

But Mr. Davenport, also in public, declared to this effect: 'That God had condescended, for the quieting of their afflicted spirits, this extraordinary account of his sovereign disposal of those whom so many fervent prayers were made continually.'

Thus, I am, Sir,

Your humble servant,

James Pierpont.'

'Reader, there being yet living so many credible gentlemen, that were eye witnesses of this wonderful thing, I venture to publish it for a thing as undoubted as 'tis wonderful.

But let us now proceed with our story. Our christians of New-Haven apprehended themselves disadvantageously seated for the affairs of husbandry, and therefore upon these disasters they made attempts of removing into some other parts of the world.'

(Editor's note: There is no basis in our family or other records to confirm this statement. While it is taken for granted that some dissatisfied or venturous persons would leave for other parts of the new World—the main body, including David, continued, during numerous generations, with the upbuilding of New Haven, Jonathan's will also denies the disaster clause, showing that successful trading in and from the Colony, could be accomplished even in the second generation.)

'One while they were invited into Delaware-bay, another while they were invited to Jamaica: offers made them from Ireland also, after the wars there were over; and they entered into some treaties about the City of Galloway, which they were to have had as a small province to themselves.

'But God of Heaven still strangely disappointed all these attempts; and whereas they were concerned how their posterity should be able to live, if they must make husbandry their main shift for their living: that posterity of theirs, by the good province of God, instead of coming to beggary and misery, having thriven wonderfully; the colony is improved with many wealthy husbandmen, and is to become no small part of the best granary for all New-England.

'And same good Providence has all along so preserved them from annoyance by the Indians, that although at their first setting down there were few towns (this also appears to be in error, as there were no other towns in 1637) "but what wisely persuaded a body of Indians to live near them: whereby such kindness passed between them that they always dwelt peaceably together: nevertheless there were few of those towns but what have seen their body of Indians utterly extirpated by nothing but mortality wasting them.

's.7. But what has now become of New-Haven Colony? I must answer. It is not: and yet it has been growing ever since it first was. But when Connecticut-colony petitioned the restored King (Charles II) for a CHARTER, they procured New-Haven Colony to be annexed unto them in the same charter: and this, not without having first private concurrence of some leading men in the colony, that it cost some time after the arrival of the Charter for the colony, like Jephtha's daughter to bewail her condition, before it could be quietly complied withal.

'Nevertheless, they have lived ever since, one colony, very happily together, and the God of love and peace has remarkably dwelt among them: however, these children of God have not been without their chastisements, especially in the malignant fevers and agues, which have often proved very mortal in most or all of their plantations.'

John Spencer Atwater, M.D.

John was born October 12, 1913 in Cincinnati, Ohio. He had the rare distinction of being delivered by his grandfather, Dr. John Reed Spencer.

In high school, John was president of Hi-Y, active in sports and outstanding as an orator. His educational background included Adelbert College, Denison University (A.B.), Indiana University School of Medicine and Johns Hopkins University. Dr. John's medical education also included period at University of Chicago and Mayo Clinic, with a final degree of Master of Science in Medicine from University of Minnesota.

Dr. John's military duty included Australia, New Caledonia, Solomon Islands, B.W.I., Admiralty Islands, New Guinea and Philippine Islands.

Dr. John has had many staff and university appointments throughout the South, including Emory, Georgia Baptist, Crawford W. Long, Grady Memorial Hospitals. Dr. John is now also associated with the firm of Dawson, Arp, Atwater & Peacock. He lives on a 12-acre estate, affectionately called "Laurelwood," built by former governor of Georgia and U.S. Senator, on a ridge overlooking Peachtree Creek. The land is historically significant in the Battle of Atlanta during the war between the States.

John Gapper Atwater

Son of Canon H. W. Atwater (No. 2183)

Born December 29, 1882 in Bardados, B.W.I. Parents returned to Canada in 1884. John spent the last 50 years of his life farming at Walkerburn, Manitoba (in the Duck Mountain country). He took a great interest in the welfare of the children of the district and served for about 25 years as school trustee. He was also Justice of the Peace for 20 years. Respected by all he was greatly missed by relatives and friends when he died on Feb. 3, 1955.

'Honorary Georgia Planter'

One of the most outstanding members of the present Atwater Clan lives in the South. Born into a time-honored family, highly respected thru savoir-faire, position and wealth, our Southern cousin is affectionately known as 'Captain James,' despite his higher rank obtained in the service of his State.

At 83 he is still active in banking and good deeds. His entire social and business life refutes the theory that rich men's sons do not live up to parental accomplishments. Having initiated, adhered to and completed many outstanding meritorious objectives on his own behalf, Captain James has never failed to help those worthy, to their goal of achievement.

Even in the last year, he has been twice honored, as one may appreciate by reading the following articles, clipped by this editor from local papers:

"Captain James R. Atwater has been selected by the Agriculture Education Division of the State Department of Education as an 'honorary Georgia Planter.' This honor is to be bestowed upon a handful of Georgians on October 21 and Captain Atwater is the first Upsonian ever picked for the honor.

T. G. Walker, a supervisor of the program, said that Captain Atwater was selected 'in honor of his work in the past to promote agricultural education in Upson county.' It is the highest honor that can come to a person in vocational education.

The Upsonian will not be able to attend the state ceremony in Macon on October 21 and a special ceremony is being planned to be held at James R. Atwater School at a later date.

In announcing the selection it was pointed out that Captain Atwater has been interested in vocational agriculture for many years. He sponsored the first vocational agriculture program in Upson County and this program was a forerunner of the F.F.A. and 4-H programs. Since the latter programs have come into existence he has contributed to them.

In the Atwater community he has contributed land for vocational agriculture and a shop building which is used in connection with vocational agriculture.

Also Captain Atwater has annually contributed prize money to encourage and promote vocational agriculture. He was at one time a peach farmer and has always promoted all farming interests in Upson.

(From the October 11, 1955 issue of The Free Press, Thomaston, Georgia.)

The following is taken from a program of the 'Recognition Meeting . . . for honoring Capt. James R. Atwater' held on Nov. 20, 1955, on a Sunday afternoon in the auditorium of the James R. Atwater School:

The purpose of this meeting is to recognize Capt. James R. Atwater for his interest in and support of FFA by conferring upon him the Degree of Honorary Georgia Planter.

Loved and respected by young and old alike, he's better known by his friends as Captain Atwater. He was instrumental in establishing the first school in the Atwater community. Because he recognizes the importance of educating boys and girls, and because of his warm affection for the people of Upson county; he has given liberally to equip the new James R. Atwater school. He gave money for erecting the Vocational Agriculture Building, and he makes regular grants to the FFA chapter to assist members in their training program.

The Future Farmers of America is a national organization of farm boys who are studying vocational agriculture in the public schools. Started in 1928, it has grown to a membership of 385,000 prospective young farmers.

The primary objective of FFA is to help and encourage its members to prepare for careers in farming. It also trains for leadership, citizenship, scholarship, cooperation, thrift and patriotism. The Future Farmer's motto is:

"Learning to do.

Doing to learn;

Earning to live.

Living to serve."

In the make-up of Volume Five, only one long article was taken from the fourth Atwater History. This concerned Captain Atwater. However, it did not include his many gifts for the advancement of educational facilities and objectives.

During his entire life he has had a keen interest in education of the youth of his community. For many years he served as member and chairman of the Board of Trustees of R. E. Lee Institute, as did his father before him.

He has through his generosity made possible the erection and equipping of many school buildings. The "Atwater Science Building," given to R. E. Lee Institute by him in memory of his father, is considered one of the outstanding high school science buildings in the South. In 1955 he was selected as the first appointee to the R. E. Lee Institute hall of famed graduates. The "James R. Atwater School" is a large rural grade school located in the Atwater community of Upson County, the campus and buildings of which were made possible through his financial support.

Much of the following material is in Volume Four.

Colonel James R., son of James W.; banker and manufacturer, was born August 16, 1872, in Thomaston, Georgia. In childhood and youth his tastes led him to the study of literature, and especially history. He was never very strong physically and was more inclined to remain indoors and read than to run out and romp with the other boys. He was a good student. At R. E. Lee Institute in Thomaston, where he graduated in 1890 he finished at the head of his class.

He has a long and distinguished military record. He joined the Upson Guards, Company H, Second Infantry, Georgia National Guard and was made its Captain on November 1899, and remained its Captain until 1906. During this period his financial support and personal leadership of the Upson Guards were responsible for its enviable record. Though later attaining higher military rank, he is still affectionately known to the people of Georgia as "Captain Atwater." From July 23, 1906, to October 9, 1907, he served in the rank of Major as Assistant Quartermaster General of the State of Georgia and in 1907 was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel and served as aide-de-camp to Governor Hoke Smith. On November 15, 1911, he was retired at the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. The Upson Guards is still an active military unit and has honored Captain Atwater by naming their armory the "James R. Atwater Armory."

Captain Atwater has always been a leader in the industrial development of his community. He was President of Thomaston Cotton Mills in 1901 and has served continuously on its Board of Directors to this date. During his business career he was President of the Odessa Bank of Odessadale and Vice-President of Upson County Oil Mills.

His primary business endeavor has been in the field of banking. He was founder of the Upson Bank and Trust Company in 1900, and through a series of mergers with the Farmers and Merchants Bank and the Bank of Thomaston emerged as the executive officer of the Thomaston Banking Company which in 1930 became the Citizens & Southern Bank of Thomaston with Captain Atwater as President. In 1946 he was named Chairman of the Board of Directors and at the age of 83 continues active in that capacity.

On February 14, 1917, he married Anne Elizabeth Walton, daughter of Peter W. and Susan Reid Walton, of Madison, Georgia. His wife comes from a family distinguished for generations, and is a direct descendant of George Walton, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. They have one daughter, Richmond Walton, born August 24, 1921. Recently, he and his wife, in memory of her parents, have given to the North Georgia Methodist Conference a new home in Madison, Georgia, for the use of retired Methodist ministers.

Captain Atwater is past master of the local lodge of the Woodmen of the World. He served as mayor of Thomaston for 12 years and is a former state senator. He has lived the tradition of his father and grandfather and is fortunate in now being able to instill their tradition of life in his grandsons.

When Captain Atwater first heard of our project for a new Atwater History, his willingness to co-operate was immediately forthcoming. He not only brought his own branch data up-to-date quickly, but sent representatives, at his own expense, far and afield, to secure collaboration from other members of the Clan. It is evident that when Captain Atwater gives himself to a project, he does not falter by the wayside because the path is long and filled with unexpected obstacles.

The following clipping from 'The Free Press' July 26, 1955, also shows his desire to continually support those objectives worthy of expansion.

"A recent $3400 gift of land to the James R. Atwater School has been made public by the principal, E. W. Foy.

Captain James R. Atwater, who has made several other contributions to the school in the Atwater community, recently presented the school with 28 acres of land adjoining the present property. The gift was valued at $3400.

"In completing the seventh year of operation the James R. Atwater School is happy to announce expansion in many lines," Mr. Foy said. "A recent gift of land suggests the progress for which the school's friends are constantly planning.

"Foreseeing larger enrollment, more buildings and widening activities, Captain James R. Atwater some weeks ago presented the school 28 acres of land. This includes some welcome shade trees. Our students have already been fortunate in having large space as compared with those in many places," Mr. Foy pointed out continuing, "the addition represents an expenditure of around $3400 and is greatly appreciated."

Mr. Foy also discussed that "as evidence of Captain Atwater's interest in the students as individuals was his gift of a five dollar bill attached to the diplomas of all forty three ninth grade graduates."

The Clan salutes a Southern gentleman who is a worthy descendant of our hardy ancestors.

B. L. Atwater

Bert Leonard Atwater was born in Addison, New York, on March 7, 1867. He was the son of Albert Chamberlain Atwater and his wife Margaret, nee Carswell.

In the early years of his business career, Mr. Atwater was connected with the furniture industry as a manufacturers' representative. He operated his own business, with headquarters in Chicago, representing the lines of several furniture manufacturing companies.

For some years before the turn of the century, and prior to his marriage to the former Blanche Cox, Mr. Atwater resided in the club quarters of the famous Chicago Athletic Association. He often reminisced of the friendships formed there with other young men who were on their way to fame in various fields of endeavor. Among the best known were the distinguished Hoosier writer, George Ade, and John T. McCutcheon, the renowned political cartoonist.

Mr. Atwater and Miss Cox were married on April 25, 1900, and made their first home in Chicago.

An important step in Mr. Atwater's business career came when he entered the chewing gum manufacturing business, embarking upon an association that was to continue for nearly half a century. The Wm. Wrigley Jr. Company of Chicago was on the threshold of expansion from a small, struggling business into a world-famous organization, and in 1907, Mr. Atwater was appointed by the late William Wrigley Jr. to head the sales activities of the company in the Eastern territory as manager of the New York office. Working closely with Mr. Wrigley, he was prominently identified with the sales program that led to the successful introduction of Wrigley's Spearmint chewing gum in the East.

For the next twenty-five years, Mr. Atwater's business and social life centered in the East, and he and Mrs. Atwater established a home for their growing family in Garden City, on Long Island. Garden City was then in its infancy as a residential suburb of New York City, and Mr. Atwater took an active interest in civic affairs and in encouraging the growth and development of the newer section of the community. He was prominent in the activities of the Episcopal Church, and was a Mason for many years, affiliated with Nassau Commandery No. 73, of Garden City.

A noteworthy event in Mr. Atwater's business career occurred in 1916, when he was elected second vice-president of the Wrigley Company. A year later, he was elected to the board of directors of the corporation. In 1920 he was elected to the position of vice-president. During these years he continued to head the company's sales activities in the Eastern part of the United States, developing distribution outlets for the fast-growing Wrigley business. In addition to his activities in the sales end of the business he was instrumental in establishing an Eastern factory for the company in Brooklyn. He traveled extensively in Central and South America, establishing sales agencies for the handling of Wrigley products in those countries. He also traveled to Europe on inspection trips for the Wrigley Company. He was an early enthusiast for air transportation in his wide-ranging travels, and made one of the first trips on a commercial air line in South America in 1927.

During his years in the East, Mr. Atwater served on the directorates of two banking institutions, Dime Savings Bank, of Brooklyn, and Hudson Trust Company (now Empire Trust Company) of New York City. He was a member of the Metropolitan and Lotos clubs of New York.

In 1932, following the death of William Wrigley Jr., at that time chairman of the board of the company, Mr. Atwater transferred from New York to Chicago to work directly with Philip K. Wrigley, president. As vice-president, his principal responsibility was in supervising the company's sales promotion activities throughout the country. At this time, the Atwaters moved their home from Garden City to Chicago, where they took up residence in the Drake Hotel.

A devoted family man, Mr. Atwater made business his principle hobby as well as his vocation. In the realm of cultural diversion, he was a devotee of music and the theater, and particularly the opera.

His special interest was people and the making of friendships for the company he represented. Hard-working, tireless and radiating enthusiasm, he was constantly on the move calling on the trade. He was gifted with a warm, cordial personality, and a distinguished appearance and manner. Combining these qualities with a spirit of helpful service, Mr. Atwater made literally thousands of friends for the Wrigley Company and himself among the wholesalers and retailers of confectionery products. He became widely known as the company's "ambassador of goodwill" to the trade, and in 1954 the National Candy Wholesalers Association adopted a resolution extending recognition to him in these words:

"To Mr. B. L. Atwater—one of the beloved deans of the confectionery manufacturing industry, this certificate of recognition of his many years of devoted service to this industry and his sincere friendship for the candy wholesalers of the nation."

Mr. Atwater took a particular interest in the young men who were making their start in the field of sales and merchandising, and he is remembered with affection and grateful appreciation by many to whom he extended help and encouragement.

In December of 1951, Mr. Atwater retired as vice-president of the Wm. Wrigley Jr. Company in order to take things a little easier. He continued in his post as director of the company, and was also elected chairman of the board of directors of its Canadian affiliate, the Wm. Wrigley Jr. Company Limited. In his last years, Mr. Atwater continued to maintain goodwill contacts with the trade and to make available to the Wrigley organization his valuable advice and counsel based on the experience accumulated in a long career as an outstanding American salesman and sales executive.

At the age of eighty-seven, Mr. Atwater passed away in his home in Chicago on September 6, 1954.

Richard Mead Atwater, Junior

No. 1370

Born—Richard Mead was born in May 16, 1873 in Millville, New Jersey.

Education—William Penn Charter School, Philadelphia, Pa., Roxbury Latin School, Boston, Mass., Kaiserliche, Konigliche Technische Hochschule, Berlin, Charlottenburg, Germany, graduated May 1894 with diploma degree of Mining and Metallurgical Engineer (cum laude).

Employment and Experience—During college vacations he worked in mines and plants in Germany, in Austria, in Belgium, in France, and in England. After graduation Richard worked in the diamond mines at Kimberly and the gold mines at Johannesburg, South Africa. From mid 1895 until end of 1897 he was employed by The Exploration Co., Ltd., London, as junior engineer acting mainly as assistant and interpreter for their field engineers, in Europe—Germany, Austria, Rumania, Russia, Serbia, Turkey, Italy, France, and Spain.

From 1898 to 1902 inclusive he was employed by Bewick, Moreing & Co., London, as their field engineer, in Western Australia, New Zealand, South Australia and Tasmania, and during 1903, as general manager of the Sons of Gwalia Gold Mining Co., West Australia; then he was sent to Malaya (as resident partner) to make a study of the tin mining and smelting industry.

Richard returned (via Paris and London) to the U.S.A. in 1904. He was appointed general manager of Gold Mine Co., Nelson, British Columbia (then the largest gold mine in Canada).

He returned to Helena, Montana in 1905. Richard became field engineer for the Cole-Ryan group inspecting mines in U.S.A., Canada, Alaska, and Mexico, including North Butte Copper Co., Consolidated Copper Mines, Calumet of Arizona, and Greene Cananea. He served as manager, in Mexico of Black Mountain Mining Co., and Sierra Consolidated Mines Co.

Richard Mead moved to Duluth, Minn. in 1909 and organized the Butte & Superior Copper Co., which became the then largest western silver and zinc producer in the U.S.A. He brought from England the Isherwood hydroelectric zinc-silver recovery method which has since become the most important process of its kind.

In 1906-07 he spent 9 months in Bolivia (with inspection trips into Peru (Cerro de Pasco) and Chile (Chile copper) inspecting tin and copper mines there for a group of U.S.A. bankers (National City Bank, Speyer & Co., W. R. Grace & Co., and American Metal Co.) who planned to build a railroad system for Bolivia. Report as to the railway was adverse, but recommended consolidation and modernized equipment for the mines. That resulted in A. S. & R. Co., taking over the Corocoro (native) copper mines, and the organization of Patino Mines & Enterprises.

From 1911 to 1937 Richard Mead was employed by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., New York international bankers as staff engineer. He supervised all their mining investments and served as their representative on boards of directors of many companies financed by them—such as Burns Bros. (coal), M. K. T. Ry. Co., Oklahoma Woodchuck Zinc-Lead Co., Copper Canyon Mining Co., and many others.

Richard Mead also served as president of North Butte Copper Co. and of the Oneida Copper Co., and field engineer for the Philadelphia Co. He made inspection and report for J. P. Morgan & Co. on the Plymouth Oil Co. of Texas and for others on the Houston Oil Company's natural gas holdings in Western Texas.

He became one of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. powers of attorney, and visited England and Europe twice, as their representative. He retired from that firm in 1937 to undertake gold placer mining in California and British Columbia. He organized and conducted operations of Columbia Explorations Co. (London backing) until stepped by World War II.

In 1943-46 he spent 18 months studying the tin industry of Mexico planning to supplement U.S.A. tin supply, then badly crippled by Japan's conquest of Malaya. This effort ended in an article written for the Engineering & Mining Journal, January, 1943 number, entitled "Can Mexico's Tin Industry be Modernized?", but up to 1955 with no actual activity by U.S.A. interest on the project.

From 1945 to date (Feb., 1955) Richard Mead carried on professional mining work in U.S.A., Cuba, and Mexico, followed in 1954-55 with active investigations in the uranium field of eastern Canada, New Mexico, and the "Plateau," and Arizona.

Personal—Quaker, Republican, Legion of Honor Member American Inst. of Mining & Metallurgical Engineers; active (1915-1921) member 7th Regiment N. Y. State National Guard, later president 7th Regt. Veterans Association.

Richard Mead Atwater married 1894 Jane Eliza Brewer, daughter Rt. Rev. Leigh Richmond Brewer, Episcopal Bishop of Montana from 1880-1916. (Children)—Margaret Floyd, Leigh Richmond Brewer, Richard Mead III. First wife died November 1933. August 1935 he married Ann Magdalen Donellon. Residence—Windtryst Barn, Chadds Ford, Pa.

Francis Atwater of New Haven

(No. 1705)

Francis, son of Henry, describes himself in the fourth volume of Atwater History and Genealogy as "author, publisher, printer, organizer street railroads, press associations, member of American Publisher's Association, National Typothetae, publisher of the first all-American daily newspaper in Cuba, author of history of Plymouth, Connecticut, and compiler of the volumes of Atwater History."

Francis was born Dec. 3, 1853 in Plymouth, Conn. and died in New Haven on Nov. 25, 1935. In 1879 he married Helena J. Sellow. They had one son, Dorence Keith Atwater, born May 10, 1880. Dorence lost his life by drowning at Kennebunkport, Me., Aug. 23, 1900 when he was but twenty.

Francis was a versatile person and he lived an interesting life. His record in Who's Who in America mentions his life and interests in Plymouth, Southington, Meriden, Wallingford, Hartford, New Britain, New Haven, East Hampton, Torrington, and Kent, all in Connecticut, in Red Bluff, California and Havana, Cuba. He was a printer and publisher primarily, but he was involved in at least two street railway companies and was connected officially with at least seven banks, all in Connecticut. He was a member in 1906 of the Connecticut State Senate and was a member of the Executive Committee of the American National Red Cross. In 1912 he was a founder and president of the Clara Barton Memorial Association.

His publications included the histories of Plymouth and Kent, Conn., 1896; four volumes of Atwater History and Genealogy, (1901, 1906, 1919, and 1927). He published the Meriden Centennial Proceedings in 1907, his Personal Memoirs in 1924 and the History of Southington in 1925.

Members of the Atwater clan can be grateful for Francis' vocation as well as for his avocation. He had a persistent interest in the records of the family and his contributions extending over at least twenty-five years took full advantage of the earlier researches and publications of Rev. Edward E. Atwater (1816-1887) and Robert Henry Atwater (1834-1889) who had made excellent studies of the family in the United States and of the origins in England. It required time and effort and money to do what Francis did for the family. Any compiler who attempts to extend the record will readily discover what a complex and baffling and frustrating task it is. And it is even more costly and difficult today than when Francis did his part in the beginning of the 20th Century. Yet, like the cathedrals of the Ile de France, no one man can claim to be the builder. Many men, each in his own generation, made contributions and the completed structure embodies the building stones of the past.

The writer of this sketch was privileged to meet Francis on two occasions during the early 1930's when Francis accepted invitations to attend two Atwater reunions of a series carried on for some years in Western New York State under the leadership of Chester Atwater of Olean, New York. In spite of advancing years and considerable physical disability, Francis made the long trip from New Haven in his car, bringing a neighbor as his companion, and contributing his part to the reunion in a generous way. It meant a great deal to more than 100 family members to have this personal contact with the compiler of the Atwater genealogy. It was then that he turned over his remaining family records to the writer with the hope that in time other and more inclusive family records might be published. Francis would rejoice that such a day has arrived.

Atwater Family Holds Reunion at Rockwell Park

Over 100 Present

The Atwater family reunion, held August 22 at Rockwell park, was well attended, there being 105 present. They came from five states and included five generations. The oldest person present, Mrs. Emma Louisa Atwater Rountree, celebrated her 94th birthday on October 5, 1953. The youngest, Roger Lee Messman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Messman, was one year old.

The Atwater history, given the day of the reunion by Elizabeth Henry, is as follows:

William Atwater was born in Connecticut, October 21, 1814. He was educated in the east, worked in the clock factory there for a while, then came west. He came to Illinois in 1837, settled at Quiver and bought land from the government. He built a cabin where he lived as a bachelor for three years to prove his claim. He married Elizabeth Ringhouse on December 25, 1840. She was born in Germany on February 20, 1824 and came to America with her parents in 1834, a six weeks ocean trip. They settled on Quiver in 1836.

Mother has in her possession, the deed to this piece of land which was purchased by grandpa from the government. It was signed in 1838 by James K. Polk, president of the United States. This land has been in the Atwater name ever since, being the old homestead where (Buz) Sheldon Atwater now lives.

There were twelve children born to this pioneer couple. My mother, Mrs. Emma Louisa Atwater Rountree is the only one living of the original family.

Grandfather Atwater was one of the few men among the early settlers who had an education and many came to him for business advice. Among the old papers mother has, are several contracts he wrote out, then they would make their X mark and grandpa signed their name in the presence of two other men who could write which would make it legal. There was no court house here at Havana, no Mason county. This part of the country was in Fulton county. There was no bridge across the Illinois River, therefore it was a hazardous trip through the bottoms to Lewistown to transact legal business.

I have heard grandma tell, they raised the sheep, she helped shear the wool, take it to the woolen mills in Fulton county herself and have it carded. Then she spun the yarn, knit all the socks and stockings for the family. She spun the thread for weaving the cloth, dyed the cloth for the outer garments, using walnut hulls for dye, and set the color, using chamber lye so it would not fade.

She made all the underwear, petticoats, dresses, men's shirts, suits, and all. They had to last two years as she made for one-half the family one year and the other half the following year.

On Sunday they put on their clean outfit. It was their Sunday go-to-meeting best. No question on what they would wear—they were content and happy to have the clean outfit.

I have also heard grandma tell when they ran out of flour and meal, of going to the field and gathering the soft ears of corn, grating it on a home-made grater and making it into corn bread and baking it for the family. Today we go to the super market and get the ready-mix.

Grandpa Atwater died February 11, 1868, and grandma was remarried later to John Kroell. Therefore we knew her as Grandma Kroell. She died September 13, 1916.

We should be proud to be descendants of this noble pioneer couple. I wonder if we fully appreciate their hardships, labor and toil, to give us our way of life with its liberty and freedom of today. It is well and fitting for us to gather together each year in their memory.

May we be blessed with the opportunity to all meet together again at this time next year. God bless us and grant us this privilege."

Among those attending the reunion were Mr. and Mrs. Hercy Atwater and Kenneth, Mr. and Mrs. James Steele and Gloria, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rountree, Mr. and Mrs. Orley Welker Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Atwater, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Friedrich and sons, Mrs. Lizzie Henry, Mrs. Emma Louisa Atwater Rountree, Mr. and Mrs. William Atwater and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Reynolds.

Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Reynolds and Hazel, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Atwater and Diane, Miss Emilie Hackman, Mrs. Lydia Seay, all from Havana; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hinnen, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hinnen and Wendell, all from Eureka.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Nichols, Congerville; Dorothy Wheelock and Sterling Wills, Barry and Barbara, of Boone, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carlisch and Larry, Forest City; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Fornoff and family, Manito; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Miller and Janet, Davenport, Ia.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Henry and family, St. Louis, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hallock and Peter Kewanee; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Atwater, Indianapolis, Ind.; Eugene Atwater, Peoria; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Miller and Nancy, Moline; Cynthia Bishop, Decatur; Mr. and Mrs. Melford Hove and family, Ardaline Wills, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Fuller and family, Stanhope, Ia.; Marilyn Varland, Radcliffe, Ia.; Mrs. Lloyd Sutton and Ronald, Kilbourne; George Herbert Todd, Toledo, Ore.; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Messman and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Messman, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Noll and family and Francis Atwater, all from Topeka.

An Unusual Occupation

My son, Montgomery Meigs Atwater, is an "avalanche-buster" for the U.S. Forest Service. He makes his headquarters at Alta, Utah, the famous ski-resort near Salt Lake City, Utah. At first he was not only an avalanche-buster but the avalanche-buster. Now there are others—most of them snow-rangers who have attended the avalanche school held every year at Alta.

Avalanches have always been one of the major hazards of the world's high places, and for many years snow-studies have been carried on in Switzerland and in Austria in the hope of learning to predict these violences of Nature, and to find some method of controlling them. But in the United States, 'til 1943 when the Alta project was set up, nothing of the kind was attempted. Avalanches appear to have been regarded as "acts of God," like earthquakes and tornadoes. Perhaps the reason for this lay in the fact that they are no problem in the great Middle West and of rare occurrence in the populous East. In the rugged western mountains, to be sure, they picked off many a traveller from a mountain trail and overwhelmed many an isolated mining camp but for the most part they thundered down, tearing up trees and dislodging rocks, but quite harmlessly otherwise.

Now it is different in the West. The enthusiasm over skiing and other winter sports takes thousands of people into the hills on every fine winter day, and other thousands travel the mountain highways, under the avalanche threat. Hence the avalanche-buster.

My son's experience during the second world war included service as Aide to the General in charge of the training of ski-troops and mountain troops. He was, before that, a skilled woodsman, having lived much of his life in Montana near the top of the Continental Divide, with interludes of taking a Harvard B.A. and of coaching football—all useful experience. A study of Swiss snow-control methods was helpful, but conditions in the Rockies differ from conditions in the Alps and for the most part he has had to blaze his own trail. At Alta he has set up a laboratory for snow-study with instruments—most of them devised by himself—for the accurate measurement of snowfall, wind direction and velocity, snow temperatures, changes in snow consistency, and the other factors that make one inclined snow-mass deadly and another harmless. But this work, important and exacting as it is, would be of little practical value without the working out of methods to neutralize the danger when understood and predicted.

The force in a great avalanche is tremendous, and no possible structure of barriers will withstand it. The only feasible method of dealing with it is to make little avalanches of the big ones before they grow big, and to bring down those that inevitably grow big, when they can be brought down safely.

Small avalanches may often be induced to slide by a skillful and daring skier, though this method has its hazards. The dangerous "cornices" that form along sharp ridges as a result of wind-action require a different treatment, as do great masses of "slab" snow. Dynamite charges, suitably placed, take care of some of these; others are persuaded to come down with cannon fire, a small howitzer gun being found the most efficient tool for the purpose. These techniques were worked out by experiment at Alta.

Travellers motoring over some of the high passes in Colorado last summer were startled to find themselves in the midst of artillery fire and may have thought they had blundered into a bit of guerrilla warfare, but it was merely a set of tests to find the best gun-emplacements and the correct range for the guns that will make those dangerous stretches of highway safe next winter.

Avalanches, of course, run in regular channels, though sometimes they run miles further and hundreds of feet deeper than in other years. The main ones have names and infamous histories. The ski resort at Alta is on the site of an abandoned silver mine of the old days and during the time of the mining activity many men were caught and killed by the avalanches. That the modern methods of snow control are effective is proved by the fact that since 1948 when the snow station was set up at Alta there has not been a single fatality there, though thousands of skiers are on the slopes every fine week-end during the winter.

My son's activities are not confined to Alta. He inspects ski projects all through the western mountains and plans safety measures and recommends safety procedure. He is called on in snow emergencies—as when last winter an army plane crashed near the top of one of the highest and most rugged peaks of the Wasatch Range. The accident happened at the height of the avalanche season and the region is one of the most inaccessible in Utah. Monty Atwater was detailed to lead the rescue party and to find as safe a route as possible up the mountain. It was an affair of four very anxious days. When the rescuers reached the wreck they found all the men aboard the plane dead, but they were able to retrieve some important government papers, and all the party got down again alive and uninjured.

When the first coast-to-coast television set-up was being made—under pressure, so that the country might view the Peace Congress in San Francisco—the construction of a vital relay station on top of a mountain in Nevada was halted when avalanches swept the only road over which supplies had to be taken to the site. My son was called upon for help in the emergency. There proved to be no possible way to make the road practicable. In fact the only safe route lay straight up the mountain along a narrow ridge—too narrow and too steep for a road—with the avalanches running harmlessly down either side. A crane was set up and the supplies were hauled up over this narrow trail on sledges and the day was saved. As a result a great many people enjoyed a memorable experience that they owed—though they did not know it—to the knowledge and ingenuity of the avalanche-buster.

Avalanche-busting is an exciting and strenuous job—and not without its hazards—but those who travel the mountain highways in winter, and those who take their sport on the snow-slopes, owe their safety and perhaps their lives, to the man with the unusual occupation.

Carleton William Atwater

No. 2382

Carleton William, son of John Wilbur and Frances Ann (Peeples) Atwater, was born on June 19, 1885. He married Mary Baron Spencer, the daughter of Dr. John Reed Spencer and Eliza Becker Spencer, in Cincinnati, Ohio on June 1, 1910.

His early education was in Kingsville and Cleveland, Ohio public schools. The Bachelor of Arts degree was conferred by Denison University, Granville, Ohio upon graduation in 1907. From there he pursued his studies in the Rochester Theological Seminary (now Colgate-Rochester Divinity School), graduating there in 1910. Other advanced special studies were done in McCormick Theological Seminary and the Butler University School of Religion. The Honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred first in 1926 by the Rio Grande College and in 1934 by his Alma Mater, Denison University.

Baptist pastorates were held in Cincinnati, Ohio, Anderson, Indiana, and Indianapolis, Indiana.

After nearly eighteen years as pastor of the First Baptist Church, Indianapolis, Indiana, Dr. Atwater retired from active pastorate on November 15, 1950.

His ministry has been characterized by significant service to his Church, to the Baptist denomination at large, to the Indianapolis Council of Churches, as well as the National Council of Churches. He served in important capacities in state work in Ohio and Indiana. Some of the offices held included being President of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, President of the Ministers Council of the American Baptist Convention, and Chairman of the Commission of Fifteen of the American Baptist Convention. The recommendations of his Commission were far-reaching, one stressing on more efficient and more adequate organization of the boards and the society of the American Baptist Convention. In addition he served as a member of the General Council and on several other important committees and commissions.

Since 1935 he has been a member of the Board of Managers of the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board. In 1939 he was made a member of the Board of Directors of Franklin College (Indiana), a position which he has filled to this date.

Contributions to civic life have been many. He is a Past President of the Indiana Society of the Sons of the American Revolution and at present is serving as Chaplain of that organization. He is a 32nd degree Mason, a member of Phi Gamma Delta and a member of the Founders and Patriots of America.

After his retirement from active pastorate Dr. Atwater served as Interim Executive Secretary and Director of City Work of the Indianapolis Baptist Association until June 1, 1954.

The Atwater Kents

A. Atwater Kent, Jr., the present head of the family, is President of the Atwater Kent Mfg. Co., and the Atwater Kent Foundation. He is also President of the Board of Trustees of the Atwater Kent Museum (Phila.) and of the Board of Directors of the American Flag House and Betsy Ross Memorial (Philadelphia).

One of his hobbies is the collection of antique automobiles. Atwater Kent, Jr., is also a member, Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, Historical Society of Pennsylvania and Sons of the American Revolution. With his immediate family, he is a life member of the Vermont Historical Society.

On July 2nd, 1941, he married Denyse S., daughter of Suzanne Raingo and Georges S. Binon of Paris, France. Their children include Suzanne Atwater, A. Atwater 3rd, Christopher Brinton and Peter Alexander. His sisters are Mrs. Elizabeth Kent Van Alen of Edgemont, Pa., and Mrs. Virginia T. Catherwood of Tucson, Arizona.

His Clubs include: Racquet (Phila.), Corinthian Yacht Club, Bar Harbor Yacht Club, Northeast Harbor Fleet, Radnor Hunt, Bar Harbor Club and Seal Harbor Club.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., March 4, 1949 — A. Atwater Kent, inventor, industrialist and philanthropist, died this morning. He was 75 years old.

Mr. Kent's marriage to Mabel Lucas, which took place in 1906, ended in divorce.

Byword to Early Motorists

After pioneering in the automobile and radio fields, Arthur Atwater Kent retired a wealthy man. His name was a byword with early motorists, particularly in connection with his ignition, starting and lighting system. In the Twenties and Thirties, Atwater Kent and radio were closely linked.

The first Atwater Kent radio set, a five-tube affair, was put out in 1923. Three years later the millionth set was turned out.

He introduced many musical celebrities to radio broadcasting, engaging for the Sunday night Atwater Kent hour over a network of stations the highest priced grand opera and concert performers. He created the Atwater Kent Foundation to conduct nation-wide auditions to discover unknown talent. The winners received liberal money prizes and courses of study in the leading musical schools.

Born in Burlington, Vt., he was the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Prentiss J. Kent. (Editor's Note: Elizabeth M., daughter of Ambrose Atwater.)

He entered the automotive industry by designing a pocket-size electric meter to test dry-cell batteries then used in automobile ignitions. In 1902 he established the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Works in Philadelphia in make telephones and small voltmeters.

Designed Ignition System

Three years later he began making his revolutionary ignition system which made a single quick hot spark instead of the ordinary stream of sparks. It was used in a dozen makes of automobiles.

Mr. Kent converted his plant to war manufacture during the first World War. After the war he continued manufacturing ignitions and starting and lighting systems until 1923, when his plants began turning out radios, one of the first vacuum tube sets to be manufactured in quantity. At the peak of production his firm produced 6,000 radios daily, and employed 12,000 workers.

In 1937 Mr. Kent restored the Betsy Ross House in Philadelphia and the next year the old Franklin Institute building and gave it to the city as a museum dedicated to the history of Philadelphia. The city named the museum for its donor. (Reprint by permission of the New York Times.)

Helen Atwater

No. 1523

Home Economist

Born in Summerville, Massachusetts, the daughter of Dr. Wilbur Olin Atwater, a pioneer investigator in the field of human nutrition. Miss Atwater literally grew up in the field to which she devoted her lifetime. Taken abroad at the age of six as her father pursued his scientific studies, she learned German in Germany and French in France. She used both languages as editorial assistant to her father in studies that were international in scope and which set the pattern for scientific experiment in this country.

Set Up Station in Connecticut

During her childhood her father conducted the first agriculture experiment station ever set up in the United States, in Connecticut. In 1894 Congress appropriated the first money for work in this field, and Dr. Atwater came to the Department of Agriculture as head of the new Office of Experiment Stations. In 1896 he turned out the first tables ever made on the composition of familiar foods.

After her graduation from Smith College, Miss Atwater helped on the first popular presentation of these facts, which went out as Farmers' Bulletin No. 142. She lived to see her father's centenary and the fiftieth anniversary of his Federal pioneering celebrated.

Two years after Dr. Atwater's death in 1907, Miss Atwater joined the staff of her father's old department, and for fourteen years continued there her work of interpreting scientific findings into layman's language. She then became first editor of the Journal of Home Economics, monthly official organ of the American Home Economics Association.

Did International Work

She was also one of the organizers of international conferences on human welfare. She served as a consultant for the Associated Countrywomen of the World, with headquarters in London.

Miss Atwater's work in connection with the joint efforts of national women's organizations began during the first World War, when she served as liaison officer between the Department of Agriculture and the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense. For twenty years before her retirement, she was a member of the Women's Joint Congressional Committee, a group of delegated Washington representatives of women's organizations which works on Capitol Hill in behalf of social welfare legislation.

Miss Atwater was a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a hygiene and housing committee chairman of the American Public Health Association. Her clubs included the American Association of University Women, the Women's National Press Club, Omicron Nu and Phi Upsilon Omicron.

Helen Woodward Atwater, editor of the Journal of Home Economics from 1923 to 1941, and previously a member of the scientific staff of the old Office of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, died in Emergency Hospital here early today after a brief illness. Her age was 71.

Although Miss Atwater had been retired for several years, she remained active in many national organizations, working to further legislation in child care, housing and consumer fields.

The Calorimeter

Today there are several million people who know the Calory by its first name. In thousands of homes the housekeeper has been trained through her favorite magazine—whether Ladies' Home Journal, Good Housekeeping, Modern Priscilla, or The Farmer's Wife—to measure food value by calories rather than price.

In the early '70's a man only a few years out of Wesleyan returned from studying two years in German universities to become professor of chemistry at the college where less than a decade before he had been graduated. Abroad he had become actively interested in the then new science of agricultural chemistry. This subject he began to follow by researches in the chemical laboratory at Wesleyan.

To those not familiar with Wesleyan it may seem somewhat unusual that a "college for culture" should lend its facilities for experimental work in agricultural chemistry, but a knowledge of the history of Wesleyan shows innumerable instances of equal liberal-mindedness on the part of its trustees.

One of Professor Atwater's chief associates, later on Professor F. G. Benedict, for some years now director of the nutrition laboratory of the Carnegie Institution, commenting on the atmosphere of Wesleyan, has said, "Whatever measure of success has accompanied my efforts, I feel certain that a large share of this was due to the active spirit of scientific research and encouragement to young men which is prevalent at Wesleyan."

Professor Atwater's early work in agricultural chemistry developed from the chemistry of the growing plant to the chemistry of the soil and fertilizers, to the feeding of domestic animals, and ultimately to the feeding of man, which was his last and all-absorbing interest.

Wherever there has been research of as high an order as Professor Atwater and his associates undertook, adequate conditions almost invariably surrounded the work. It is hardly possible to conceive work of such magnitude as developed through Professor Atwater's work at Wesleyan being conducted with the facilities at his disposal, but with what he had Professor Atwater laid the foundation upon which has been built two super-structures which will last for many decades, if not forever.

Single-handed, he worked out a system of investigation in agricultural chemistry and subsequently in the nutrition of man that, taken up by the government, formed the basis of the establishment of the broad series of agricultural experiment stations that now exist. In 1873, with a grant of $1,000 from one Wesleyan's Alumni, and permission from the Trustees to use the laboratory, the first agricultural experiment station in the United States was established, and Professor Atwater was made the director.

As the movement spread rapidly there was soon needed a central clearing house for the scientific work of the stations. This work coming logically under the head of the Department of Agriculture, Professor Atwater was chosen by this department as the first Director of its experiment stations.

Soon after this, from the study of animal feeding, Professor Atwater was directing his energies to chemical and statistical researches on the food and nutrition of man. He had early realized the importance of a social and economic study of the relations of food and diet to the labor, power, health and moral tone of communities, and it was from this scientific studies of dietaries, begun in a small way, that the investigation developed into a large investigation of the dietetic condition obtaining in various parts of the country.

Through the work of this college professor, working with increasing equipment, special appropriations were secured from Congress to study the nutrition of man, and the whole enterprise soon became an extensive co-operative study of food and diet extending literally from coast to coast.

While Professor Atwater's work in these directions had attracted much attention from physiologists and economists, the venture that placed him in the foremost rank of the abstract scientists as such was his effort to demonstrate the fundamental laws in nutrition, and thus place upon a scientific basis what had hitherto been Empiricism in dietetics. For this purpose he succeeded in interesting the government and individuals, as well as other institutions, in raising a large sum of money for the construction of a respiration calorimeter, without the remotest expectation of securing results of immediate practical value. The whole enterprise was based upon the higher plane of abstract scientific research—a search for truth.

The work done with the respiration calorimeter attracted early attention from many scientific authorities. A number of grants at various times were made by the Carnegie Institution at Washington. All this money was devoted to abstract scientific research with the respiration calorimeter devised and constructed in the basement of Judd Hall, the chemical laboratory at Wesleyan University. The work done here was so important that the Carnegie Institution carried it on from here to a building specially designed for the purpose, located in a larger city near medical schools and hospitals.

The present laboratory is the admiration of all foreign physiologists as well as American, but as the director has said, this building would not exist had it not been for the encouragement of the Board of Trustees of Wesleyan University and the energy of Professor Atwater in founding this fundamental research with the respiration calorimeter.

At this point it might be interesting to quote from a Wesleyan University Bulletin, No. 13, dated May, 1896, a paragraph about a Respiration Calorimeter's work, with its particularly modest and significant last sentence:

"Research upon nutrition has reached the point where the study of the application of the laws of the conservation of matter and of energy in the living organism are essential. This is to say, we must be able to determine the balance of income and outgo of the body, and this balance must be expressed in terms, both of matter and of energy. For this purpose a respiration calorimeter is being elaborated here. This is an apparatus in which an animal or a man may be placed for a number of hours or days, and the amounts and composition of the excreta, solid, liquid and gaseous; the potential energy of the materials taken into the body and given off from it; the quantity of heat radiated from the body; and the heat equivalent of the muscular work done, are all to be measured.

"During the past two years the enterprise has had the support of the U.S. Department of Agriculture which had made this inquiry a part of its food investigations. As is often the case in such inquiries it has been thought wise to say very little until definite results should be ready for publication."

Comment or philosophizing on the work of the man who did so much for human welfare is unnecessary. Quoting from another Wesleyan University Bulletin of December, 1907, here is an account of his life in one paragraph:

"Wilbur Olin Atwater was born in Johnsburg, Warren county, New York, on May 3, 1814, but much of his early life was spent in Vermont. After three years at the University of Vermont, he entered Wesleyan University as a senior and was graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts in 1865. He served in successive years as principal of schools in Colchester, Vermont; Spencer, Massachusetts; and Westport, New York. After a year as a student in the Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University, he received the degree of doctor of philosophy in 1869, and then spent two years in foreign travel and study, paying special attention to agricultural chemistry. In 1873 he was elected instructor in chemistry in Wesleyan University, and in the following year was promoted to be professor of chemistry, which title he held until his death, though incapacitated for work since November, 1904. From 1875 to 1877, Professor Atwater was the first director of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, which was the first established in this country. In 1888 he became the first director of the Office of Experiment Stations in the United States Department of Agriculture and held the office until 1891. With both of these institutions he kept in active touch until his illness, and in the latter post of his two successors have been his friends and associates, Doctor A. W. Harris, '80, and Doctor A. C. True, '73. His last important appointment was as chief of the nutrition investigations of the United States Department of Agriculture, and it was under the patronage of this department and of the Carnegie Institution of Washington that his latest researches were conducted. Of the numerous scientific and social organizations and enterprises with which Professor Atwater was connected, and of the various honors which were conferred upon him, the lack of space forbids the enumeration. Neither is it possible to list the more than 150 publications which bear his name."

And in conclusion this note—a minute concerning Professor Atwater adopted by the faculty of Wesleyan University shortly after his death in 1907:

"In the death of Wilbur Olin Atwater, Wesleyan University loses a member of its faculty who in scientific research stood pre-eminent. His name was more widely known in the scientific circles of this country and Europe than that of any other professor in the institution at the present or in the past. Himself an investigator, he knew how to engage others in the work of investigations. He had rare judgments and his reputation were largely due to his ability as an organizer and director of scientific work. In the earlier part of his scientific career his work was devoted chiefly to agricultural chemistry, and he was a potent influence in the creation of a more scientific agriculture."

(EDITOR'S NOTE: I had hoped to have my friend, 'C. W.', Olin's son write an article about his father's unusual career. For many years I maintained offices in 56 Wall Street, N. Y. City, where Charles Woodward also had his office. But 'C. W.' had passed away since I left New York. Only through Wesleyan President, Butterfield, was I finally able to contact 'C. W.'s son.) Luther E. Atwater, Sr.

(No. 2977)

Final rites for Luther E. Atwater, Sr., (No. 2977) November 3, 1954 held at 11 o'clock at Front Street Methodist Church here, with burial in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Atwater, 76 years of age, was a resident of 903 West Davis Street.

Looked to as one of the pioneer automobile dealers in North Carolina, he founded Burlington Auto Company here in 1912. Sometime ago he was recognized not only as one of the first automobile dealers in Burlington but the sixth oldest Ford dealers in the two Carolinas and the 146th oldest dealer in the United States.

He was a native of Orange County, son of John Fletcher and Mrs. Julia Bynum Atwater. He was a resident of Burlington for more than 55 years of his life.

When the automobile industry started moving nation-wide, however, Mr. Atwater began studying the field and, in turn, founded his own organization, the Burlington Auto Company, that has remained in the family since that time.

Mr. Atwater was a member of the Front Street Church and was one of the first teachers of its Baraca Class. Dr. W. L. Clegg, pastor of the church, officiated.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Manie Garrison Atwater, of the home; two daughters, Mrs. C. H. Keels of McColl, S. C., and Mrs. Joe Pell, Jr., of Pilot Mountain; four sons, J. Wilson and Robert N. Atwater, both of Burlington; Luther E., Jr., of Columbia, S. C. and Dr. Frank C. Atwater of Greensboro; one sister, Mrs. W. A. Maynard, Sr., of Burlington; 11 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Robert N. Atwater founds new authorized Ford dealer for Burlington, N. C., Atwater Motor Company.

The new automobile dealership has Mr. and Mrs. Luther E. Atwater, Jr., of Columbia, S. C., as president and vice-president, and Mrs. Robert N. Atwater as vice-president. Robert N. Atwater, the only officer who will be active in the operation of the company, will serve as secretary-treasurer and general manager.

Son of Luther E., Sr., the city's first Ford dealer, and Mrs. Atwater, he was with Burlington Auto Company from 1936 until he resigned December 13.

A graduate of Burlington High School and of Davidson College with the class of 1936, he spent four years with the Army during World War II, serving both in the European and Pacific Theatres of operations. He was released as a captain.

He is a steward in the Front Street Methodist Church, is a member and former president of the Alamance County New Car Dealers Association, and a member of the Rotary and America Business Clubs; chairman N. A. Dealers Association, Chamber of Commerce committeeman, member of Beta Theta Pi.

He also serves as a director of the Merchants Association and as chairman of the Advancement Board of Alamance District of Cherokee Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Other organizations to which he belongs include the Piedmont Aviation Club, Alamance Country Club, and the Burlington Boating Club.

He is married to the former Miss Julia Brent Byrum of Greensboro. They have two children and reside at 459 Parkview Drive.

Experiences In Africa

In August, 1949 my family and I departed from Savannah, Georgia for Cape Town, South Africa. We were sent by the Church of Christ to South Africa to assist in establishing churches in that country, particularly among white people in the larger cities. During the five years of our residence there congregations were established in Johannesburg, Durban, Pretoria, East London, and Port Elizabeth, plus numerous churches among colored and native people.

Church buildings were erected in Johannesburg, Pretoria and East London during my stay. I supervised construction (for the most part) of the Johannesburg building, which was the first building ever erected upon the African Continent by the Churches of Christ for a white church. A religious journal, "The Christian Advocate," was founded, and I was elected to serve as its editor from the beginning until my departure from Africa last year. We also managed a weekly radio broadcast, developed Bible correspondence courses (printed both in English and native languages), and distributed thousands of tracts.

While in Southern Africa, I made my permanent residence in Johannesburg—a city of nearly a million population. There my youngest daughter (Martha Anne) was born on November 3, 1951. While residing in Johannesburg, I traveled over much of South Africa to help promote work among natives. Countries visited and in which work was done were Bechuanaland, Southern Rhodesia and Northern Rhodesia. In the Rhodesias I visited numerous missions operated by Churches of Christ, and assisted in their work.

While overseas I preached in the following countries: Northern Rhodesia, Southern Rhodesia, South Africa, Italy, Germany and France.

In all, we visited nineteen countries while overseas, including countries of Africa, Asia and Europe. Among the more outstanding countries visited were: Arabia, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Egypt, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Luxemburg, France and England. We arrived back in the United States in June of last year, after five years abroad.

My family consists of myself, my wife (Naomi Holt Miller), and two daughters, Mary Lee (age 11½) and Martha Anne (age 3½).

—WAYMON D. MILLER

My grandfather, John Wesley Atwater, was a local preacher in the Methodist Church. He had a large farm so served several poor churches around him for twenty-five years but charged them no salary for his services. He told me just before he died that he had never failed to have a sermon ready when called upon. He and his wife went one Sunday morning to visit a married daughter in an adjoining county. On the way he was impressed with the need to prepare a sermon. He asked his wife to drive the horse while he got out his Bible and prepared his text, not knowing when nor where he would preach from it. When he reached his daughter's home they were ready to go to church. He said he had always wanted to hear the pastor of their church, so while grandmother and Aunt Delia stayed at home to prepare dinner, he went to church with Uncle Will.

He was a tall, slender man and he sat down in the back of the church hoping the preacher would not see him. But the preacher saw him anyway and soon after the service began, asked him to come up into the pulpit and preach. Grandfather knew then that was why God had told him to prepare his sermon.

Of his nine children, only the youngest son, John Patterson Atwater (No. 2992), Thomaston, Ga., is living. He is an old bachelor 80 years old. I am the oldest living grandchild of John Wesley Atwater. I am 71 years of age.

I remember my great-grandfather, Edmund Browder Atwater, quite well. Georgia was just being settled when he moved there from North Carolina and settled in Upson Co., Ga. He built a log cabin with one room. For furniture he bored an auger hole in a log at one end another on the side of the house and inserted the end of a pole in each. He cut a post leaving two crotches where limbs were cut off and drove it into the dirt floor of the cabin and laid the other ends of his poles in the crotches to make the frame of his bed. The slats were poles nicely skinned of bark with one end stuck between logs in the wall and the other laid on the pole making the side railing of the bed. On these he laid his straw-filled mattress. His table and chairs were blocks sawed from trees with legs fitted into auger holes. Of course, they cooked on the fireplace.

He acquired a good bit of land and after many years, was a man of wealth. There were no banks except in large towns so he loaned his money and was called a banker.

He was a grand old man, loved by everybody, and was a good christian. One day at his church the members had been telling of God's goodness and all were feeling good and happy. As they got up from their knees after a prayer one of the men started singing "not a foot of land do I possess, no cottage in the wilderness." Grandfather began fishing in his pockets and hurried across the church and thrust a paper into the man's hand. "Here, brother, here take this. You have got some land."

It seems that the man had mortgaged his home to grandfather for some money and was failing to make payment. Grandfather felt so happy over God's goodness to him that he gave the man his mortgage.

With best wishes,

—MRS. ADDIE MAY FOX MALONE

Oldest Masillon Building To Fall This Spring

Structure Managed By Three Atwater Generations
Condemned As Fire Hazard

Massillon, Ohio, Feb. 11.—This city's oldest business structure, which has been condemned as a fire hazard, will be razed by house wreckers as soon as weather permits outside work.

The structure, which stands on Exchange St. S.W., just off Lincoln Way W. houses the D. Atwater & Sons Feed Supply Co., a firm that has been in existence for 100 years, with three generations taking hand in its management.

The building was constructed about 1827 or 1828, at the time the Ohio canal was projected through this city. Hiram and Marshal Wellman, pioneer settlers of Massillon, were the builders and they used the best timber available, hewn by hand, in erecting the place which later was the largest warehouse on the canal.

Fine Timber Used

Although numerous other storage places sprung up at the same time, the Atwater building is the only one that remains in this city. The wood used in its construction today is in the best state of preservation.

Letters and advertisements unearthed during the preliminary destruction work by W. K. Atwater of 4th St. NE, last member of the family long connected with the firm, reveal that the warehouse was used extensively by farmers in this district as a storage place for grain. The oldest letter, written in January of 1834, is a request for space in which to store wheat. According to Atwater great quantities of grain, salt, farmers' supplies and commodities were stored in the building until such a time as they could be shipped over the canal to distant markets. Supplies also were shipped into the warehouse from other points in this part of the country and then distributed to businesses and farmers east and west of the city.

Twin Brothers In Charge

J. D. and D. R. Atwater, twin brothers, were the first ancestors of Will Atwater, to be connected with the warehouse. They came to Massillon from New Haven, Connecticut, and took charge of the building in 1831, more than 100 years ago. Following the death of the brothers, Will Atwater's father took over the place and gave it the title of D. Atwater & Sons. Upon his death in 1908, Will Atwater and his brother, C. M. Atwater, continued to conduct the business. In 1931 C. M. Atwater died, leaving his brother to carry on. And with the destruction of the building his regime as the last member of the oldest business family in Massillon will come to a close.

Lenham, Kent, 1953

By RICHARD ATWATER WOLCOTT (2059)

While stationed in England with the U.S. Air Force in 1953, I had the opportunity of visiting Lenham and seeing for myself the vicinity described in Vol. 5 of the Atwater Genealogy.

With due credit given to the Air Force for providing my trip to England, the inspiration for my visit to Lenham came from my Aunt, Mrs. Edgar F. Atwater. (1) It was she who familiarized me with the Atwater Genealogy, displaying her keen interest and background on the subject.

Upon receiving passes on the first of May, Corporal Duane Curry, an Air Force friend, and I set out for Lenham. After leaving our base at Lahenheath near Newmarket, a prominent racing center, we went first to London, and changed trains for the several hour ride to Lenham. It was a pleasant day and we enjoyed the sights of the green rolling country—its many farms, orchards and communities.

It was mid-afternoon when we reached Lenham, and we realized that we would have to make a rather hurried visit.

We walked the short distance from the train station to the village square over a narrow, winding road with only an occasional bicycle in transit. The village center was almost deserted, although there were several bicycles and automobiles parked at the various shops. Since the church was in view, we walked into the churchyard and looked at the weathered gravestones, many of which were completely devoid of inscriptions.

Wishing to enter the church, we sought permission in the Vicarage, where we were greeted by the Rector's wife and daughter. The Rector was busy, but he spared a few minutes to welcome us. After we explained our purpose, his daughter, Miss Ione Strickland, volunteered to show us around. We went through the church, admiring its old historical furnishings. We learned that the church had been rebuilt once in 1299 and again after the Norman's pillage; yet, the church retains its ancient appearance. We viewed the bronze plaque imbedded in the floor which mentions Robert Atwater whose daughter inherited Royton Manor.

Upon leaving the church, we hired a taxi and drove over the rolling fields to Royton Manor, now known as Chapel Farm because a chapel is situated on the premises.

The owner invited us to look around the place, but failed to offer his entire house for our observations. The house is situated on a hill and at the foot of the hill is a little stream which is the source of the River Stour. The farm was actively cultivated with several large fields of wheat. The house is large, two storied stone, solidly built and in good condition. While inside we marvelled at its sturdy construction with its large wooden beams forming the superstructure. One of the rooms that the owner showed us, presumably the game room, was decorated with elaborate woodcarvings. We learned that at one time there was more carved woodwork, but previous owners had removed some.

Since we didn't want to impose on the owner's hospitality, we were satisfied to look around the outside and to take pictures.

After thanking him for the visit, we returned to the Rector's house and brought our visit to a close since it was almost time for the train. Thanking Miss Strickland for her time and effort, we said goodbye and bade farewell to Lenham and a very pleasant afternoon.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: For another visit to Lenham, Kent, see Vol. 4, p. 25. The most interesting item of Margaret Atwater Jones' story refers to the old records which he (the vicar) kept at the vicarage and showed me the inscriptions of births, baptisms, marriages, and deaths (of Atwaters). On the first page of one book was the record of the baptism of Robert Atwater in 1588.)

AUTHOR'S SECTION

There is little to say about the author of this volume. An undistinguished fellow involved in mundane pursuits of various kinds for many years in Wall Street, New York—all highly honorable and many of which established records—he still did not feel as though he had accomplished anything worthwhile during his sojourn here.

On the other hand, Jessie, his wife, in her hey-day was a brilliant personality. It was thru her initiative that he financed and published Femina—a magazine for thinking people. From her remaining unpublished poems, he requested several of her scholarly friends including Dr. Mildred Woffenden, Mary and Margaret Buckley and Gladys Blakey to select a few suitable for this history.

Remember, members, the modus operandi of the true poet symbolizes words the meaning of which—at first—are beyond the immediate grasp of us ordinary punsters. Therefore, in order to properly understand her ingenious epigrams read them more than once. Remember the poet spans cons in a few words, while giving lightning thrusts to the essence of the subject.

Later, if time is allowed, we hope to republish many of her editorials and the balance of her poetical works—from which she was withdrawn so unexpectedly. And this might have been a much better work, if she had been physically able to read and revise it.

The following of her poems were selected for this issue:

Word Power

My dearly Beloved:

Play with words, toss them up in sport, see how high you can make them go, yet catch them again—like a child:

Hoard words, heap them into glittering piles, listen to their golden sounds and gloat over them—like a miser:

Dip into words, cleave their shining surfaces and lost awhile in their shallow coolnesses, emerge refreshed and invigorated—like a bather:

Or better, delve into words, seeking deeply-buried meanings or long-lost significances,—perchance to bring up ancient treasure—like a diver.

Send words out with kindly messages attached, watch them fly away with your thoughts . . . then wait for them to return to you—like doves:

Greet bold, new words as well as cling to the old and cherished—aware that all words have innate values and distinct personalities—like people:

Better yet, worship all holy words, make obeisance in their presence, bow before their magic and kneel before their wonder—like a priest:

Dare even BE a certain word, which living on generation after generation, bears profound meaning and carries joy and solace—like Love:

With the first word, the first being initiated a human miracle, as the last to gasp out the last word, will pronounce the human débâcle, for the word is badge of all humanhood . . . its symbol of creative power—like God:

So, dearly Beloved, worship words: and trust, dying among them, to merge at last with the Final Word:—that Word, immortal, everlasting, . . . Eternity!

Woman Power

*Blood, milk and tears, these liquid three—components of a chemistry
Scourging the body physical, distil the essence spiritual . . . of Woman:

Crimson ooze, distressing the child: red bruize of maidenhood . . . exiled;
Scarlet toll extorted by birth: blood pays all costs which yield her worth to Woman:

Impatient stream whose gush attests the eagerness of yearning breasts . . .
And bowels to bowels again ties them: the childflower to its parent stem . . .
to Woman:

Those taut exasperated nerves, whose sheer excess her function serves . . .
Tears ease their tension, still the stress: even spill the flooding happiness of Woman:

In the strength of centered purposiveness, Jesus, the Man, in his distress
Showed that same force invincible: the great Creative Principle of Woman:

Man of the gaping wound, bleeding, torn: whom milk of mercy left forlorn:
Whose tears met hers when "Jesus wept," what was thy God's divine concept of Woman?

Was it that she, destined to be slave of her own biology . . .
Should live to see the final doom of the human fruit of the bleeding womb
of Woman?

O, crucified "Fool," forgotten Prince . . . of Peace, our world's sad failure hints:

Perchance Man's bloody Brotherhood awaits a bleeding Sisterhood
of Woman!

*Acknowledgment to Isadora Duncan, in whose Autobiography, "My Life," published in 1927, these words occur in different order. Describing the birth of a child in Paris during the German siege of World War I, she writes: "As I lay there, torn and helpless, a triple stream of tears and milk and blood poured from me."

The Human Tree

A man . . . a woman,
hewn from the selfsame Tree:

The taller—his head always straining higher,
he places his trust in reasoned Thought;
Broader of reach—her heart ever beating faster,
she pins her faith to intuitive Understanding:

His feet are rooted in soil: the earth must support him;
She joins him at their core; his strength must sustain her—
He, trunk of the human tree; she, branch, bearing flower and fruit:
His, the vertical expression—part of earth itself, upward-striving;
Hers, a horizontal influence—at one with creation, all embracing:

Cross-beams of an ancient crux-symbol of sex, of love and of sacrifice, both merge toward a center of being—in union, neither male nor female;
yet diverge into separate entities—in division, a man and a woman:
Without her, only a sterile stump, man is stripped of all actual significance;
Without him, merely a barren log, woman is divested of any real meaning:

Eons back in eternity, the Tree was hewn . . .
Eons forward in eternity, Science may heal the wound and these "twain" reunite within the Original Tree, . . .

Meanwhile, a man and a woman —
halves of an integral Whole, demand completion—each, in its counterpart:
Biennial spirit seeks Unity in humanhood!

Vistas

You feel it, when your train roars through some city and a drab review of shanties, shacks and shops rush by . . . then, its forefinger pointing high, a spire dominates the sky with magnet-power which instantly transports your spirit from the dull and ugly, to the beautiful . . .

and feel it, then:

You sense it, when the eye perceives beneath fret-lace of locust leaves, supple, sun-lit interstices, wherein beguiling traceries carve on the copper of the sky, mazes whose lovely filigree ensnares your spirit in a spell of what seems certain miracle . . .

and sense it, then:

You know it, when pausing before some old cathedral, to adore those martyrs, prophets, Saints-in-God, whose pious faiths patiently plod a frieze across its stone facade, you meet an all-compelling pred of spirit into empathy with their austere concepts of duty . . .

and know it, then:

This surging reach toward some far goal, this sudden sally of the soul, this blending of identity with these rare aspects of beauty, revealed at times exquisitely in Art, Nature and Humanity . . . insights, none may buy or sell . . . vistas of Truth, invaluable!

Sappho

In deep reflection, freed from sex-coercion,

By preference, chaste—a sentient, Grecian

One wooed silence, where mind and Muse might heart it:

Priestess of Beauty

Whose genius was Spirit;

The other, a wanton, whose unleashed desires

Goaded her flesh until sensual shoddy

Flaring in lusts of elementary fires

Blazed to Lesbian

Beguilements of body;

Sharing one temple—a vestal, a harlot:

As pagan, as poet, playing the same lyre;

Robed now, in tortured restlessness of scarlet,

Then, clad in quiet

Whiteness of calmed attire,

Obeded the self-same call to consecration.
 Urged of one love, expressed in counter-fashion:
 The vestal, in creative sublimation:

The harlot, body's
 Primordial passion;

Beauty was means—and end. Bruized, ever-yearning,
 One chased what flesh a chance moment admired:
 The other, eternal values discerning.

Captured a music . . .
 . . . Spirit-inspired!

“Fragilina*” Faces Mars

*White marble nude in The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City—the work of Attilio Piccirilli. The sculptor has shaped an adolescent, kneeling girl, whose averted head, arm positions and title convey overtones of irresolution, timidity—even reluctance to meet reality.

So frail a bough to face its fate; so tender a stem to bear
 Its fruit, she seems to hesitate—afraid or loath to wear
 The grandeur of her womanhood; or dare, full grown of purpose,
 Fearlessly express the Future on such present slenderness:

She is embodiment of Peace, who kneels before the hour
 When in the fullness of release, she wields a surer power;
 Yet, can but dream Today away and cower, although Tomorrow,
 Dread reality menaces sperm and womb disastrously:

Stark force of circumstance, empower the bough to face its burgeon:
 Strengthen this stem; bring bud and flower to fruition. As guerdon
 Of courage, grant her a near acconchement: that all peoples of the earth
 May hear the birth-cry of a finer, nobler Era.

When Peace, recast in stronger mold of bronze, shall openly
 Defy War's rust-corroding hold on man's society
 And stand erect, century after century—a modern Pax, Whose world-wide ministrations embrace creatively One Family of Nations!

*Rome had its Goddess of Peace . . . Pax. The Pax Romana included most of the then-known world and endured hundreds of years.

COMMENTARY AND ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

How is your I.Q. on the history of your ancestors? Would you receive a plus or a minus, in an examination covering this most interesting subject—especially to a descendant of David Attwater?

Since I undertook this "labor of love"—despite adverse predictions by family members—many erroneous stories have been called to my attention. Naturally, the ones concerning the "strange" spelling of my own name intrigued me more than all others. With over one hundred inquiries, about the double "t," answers were necessary. But the explanatory Christmas cards of 1954 did not stop the inquiries.

One reasonable story—even if inaccurate as to most of us double t's—claimed the change in spelling was incited thru Revolutionary feuds in '76. The Patriot took one spelling—the Tory the other. A similar tale had the King giving a grant of land in New Haven to one of our family members, during the war, who, of course, was a Tory and with the same ending. Undoubtedly, there were members of our family on the wrong side—according to how one viewed the conflict.

If many of the curious who wrote me had ever read an Attwater Genealogy, they could have answered their own queries. Members who doubted my New Haven ancestry because of spelling and present California residence, should realize that David's descendants now reside in every state in the Union. Of course, my father, Samuel Hobart, and my grandfather, Elisha, were both born in New Haven, Conn. I was less fortunate—being born in New York City.

All members and especially those bearing the name Attwater, will be interested in knowing that during our long and tedious search for family members, in the United States and Canada, we found only two families bearing the name of Attwater, who disclaimed David as their ancestor. The following letter explains one case:

"My Dear Mr. Attwater: My husband was not of the 'David Attwater Family in America.' He was born in Tairstock, Devon, England, on 13 May 1888 and died in 'Chicago' on 11 January 1949. He came to America, with 'Sir Johnson Forbes Robertson' in 1913, as company manager. On our frequent tours, we often met people by the name of 'Attwater,' but you are the first, that used the 'Attwater.' The latter is used in England and the extra T, must have been dropped along the way in America.

Sincerely, Florence Baird Attwater."

"The pedigree of honey
Does not concern the bee;
A clover, anytime, to him,
Is aristocracy."

—Emily Dickinson.

The other party, from Pittsburgh, wrote: “. . . upon arrival here from Germany (my father) after being naturalized—had his surname changed through action of the Court in 1922, from Auf'm Wasser to Atwater.”

There has been some doubt in the minds of many family members—that our statement of six previous Atwater histories was correct. As the writer possessed the first Atwater Genealogy, published in 1851, he requested his cooperative and good friend, ‘Rex’ Atwater, to settle the matter for all time. His excellent article about the Father of Atwater Genealogy—Reverend Edward Elias Atwater—gives just, if delayed credit, to a worthy pioneer.

The following Library of Congress record may be of interest to present members and those who come after us:

Why past editors and compilers found it necessary to misspell all the Attwater names of our English ancestors is hard to understand. They were not one “t” members. We found no difficulty in this task—designating the New World two “t” members as they would wish to be listed.

David wrote “Attwater” in his will—all of it written in his own hand—the last double “t” being his signature.

There could be many nice things to say about our co-authors. However, they are all well-known in their respective occupations or communities.

Dr. Reginald Atwater has been an executive of the American Medical Association for many years. Not only doctors but prominent citizens thruout the country respect his diplomacy, knowledge and ability.

Ray H. Mattison, who has written many historical articles and stories of the “Bad Lands,” has contributed one of our most interesting connections with the Old World.

Helen Atwater Wrigley, wife of Philip K. Wrigley, who is an outstanding figure in industrial and sport financing, is known for her own many good works.

George Franklin Atwater, writer of the “Charter Oak” story, is father of a well known writer, Franklin Simpson, co-author of a number of McGraw-Hill books.

When Lowell Thomas sent me a note about "Monty," I immediately wrote Mary Meigs Atwater, his mother. The picture and her interesting article will be found in the Historical Section.

John Atwater Pratt is justly proud of the unusual long career of her renowned grandfather.

Richard Atwater Wolcott, our youngest contributor, did his stint in the U.S. Air Force.

Hubert F. Atwater was not only close to Francis but also had the distinction of personal contact with Clara Barton.

In addition to those mentioned above, the author wishes to thank all members sending in extra genealogical material. Special mention should include Capt. James R. Atwater, Cleo Atwater Crowl, James Bassett Atwater, Ruth Atwater Sonderegger, June Franklin, De Witt H. Fessenden, Henry L. Atwater, Nancy Atwater English, Mrs. Harry Atwater and Mrs. Helen Wind, who has since passed away.

In the volume Francis incorrectly called Volume I, Edward Elias also contributed a great portion of the new history and genealogical material. And tribute should be accorded Robert Henry Atwater, who, after painstaking research, wrote the first eighty-three pages of so-called Volume I.

In this vein, we feel it is not only a pleasure but a duty on our part, to record other Atwater Family members of distinction.

ATWATER, Caleb (Dec. 25, 1778-March 13, 1867). Born North Adams, Mass. Pioneer, Author and Educator. Appointed by President Jackson to treaty with the Winnebago and other Indians of Prairie du Chien, which treaty was finally ratified by Congress in 1829. He was the first advocate of forest conservation; first to predict the success of the railway; he was the first historian of his state and the founder of her (Ohio) school system.

ATWATER, Lyman Hotchkiss (Feb. 3, 1813-Feb. 17, 1883). Clergyman and Educator.

ATWATER, Jeremiah, see Nat. Bio., p. 352, v. 12, 105.

MASON, Caroline Atwater, b. 1853, author, m. Rev. John Mason.

ATWATER, John Wilbur, N. C., m.; Fifty-Sixth Congress.

WIND, Helen E. Ables Genealogy, d. 1955.

ATWATER, Asa Godfrey, War Service 1914-1916, from Lieut. to Colonel. Foreign Service 14 years, Battalion Commander German Ardennes Offensive. Member of many organizations and clubs; now living in Phoenix, Ariz. Awarded medals for meritorious service military operations.

COLE, Pvt. John P., of Signal Corps, killed in action in France; m. Gladys Crook of Southfield, son, John P., Jr., sister, Mrs. J. D. Moore, of Mayfield and mother, Mrs. John P. Cole.

ATWATER, Gordon, geologic, B.A. University of Iowa, same M.S., Univ. of Wisconsin. Doctor of Philosophy. Member of many professional and scientific organizations. Now living New Orleans, La.

ATWATER, H. Kert, twice Mayor of Burlingame, Calif., also served as Mayor of Sycamore, Pa., in 1912. B. Youngstown, Ohio, the Mayor d. April 29th, 1955. He was a member of many organizations and served as V.P. of California Real Estate Association. His widow, Mrs. Christine B., a son, H. Kent, Jr., daughter, Mrs. Alfred W. Escoffier and a sister, Mrs. Thomas Jenkins survive.

ATWATER, Gordon A., Management Consultant, Purdue University, USPS.

Former Director of Hayden Planetarium. Writer and member of many scientific and educational organizations. Residence, New Rochelle, N. Y.

ATWATER, Isaac, 1893. History of Minneapolis.

All articles, not attributed to publications or individuals, are by the Author. Honor students, Loraine Ko and Arlene Goldberg, of the University of California, deciphered and typed the individual family records, under the supervision of the Author. Checking and proof-reading of the Genealogy was finally completed thru the co-operation and assistance of Pearl Smith Vogt.

In addition to family members, the Author wishes to thank all our friends, who have taken such an unselfish interest in this work. Besides these heretofore mentioned, our appreciation and thanks to Ruth R. Roberts for her final reading of the typesetter's completed pages.

Last, but not least, to that talented young actress and artist, Alice Nobes Lunsford, for her continued interest and especially her artistic work on the ATTWATER ARMS AND CREST, which thru her aesthetic endeavors is now in the homes of so many of our family members.

Finally, may I call to the attention of those members interested in 'Heraldry' the following facts. While the one we use in this volume is the best looking of the three Arms and Crests, attributed by Burke and others to Atwater families, it has not been subjected to embellishment or doctoring by the artist, which has been the case with so many of the older family symbols which are now offered to the public. The coloring by the artist has been taken from authentic records of the past.

Even the motto—PATRIA CLARA CARIOR LIBERTAS—(translated, 'dear is country but liberty is dearer still,' now used by some Atwater members, has been discarded by this Author, as Contra bonos mores.

Does any member of our clan imagine that Edward IV, Henry VIII, Richard III or that unspeakable Elizabeth would have allowed a show of 'poor manners' on any banner of chieftain or knight?

(Editor's Note: As a young man, Elisha, my grandfather, established a large business as a ship-chandler. His quarters occupied an entire warehouse of three and one-half stories and basement on the corner of Burling Slip, New York City. Elisha also controlled a "Packet Line" between New York and North Florida. His interests were far-flung—throuth the world—as he outfitted ships for many distant lands. Financing many of these ventures made him a very wealthy man. Before he was forty years old, he sold out and retired.

Later, Elisha acquired large properties in the Bronx and finally a very beautiful estate at Huntington, L. I. I have been told by one of the chief executives of the Telephone Company, that when the first dial system was being tested, his name—with the names of other prominent old families of New York—was picked for the experimental try-out of the new system. When I doubted this because my grandfather always used three "t's"—the executive exclaimed: "Well, we just dropped one of them."

My grandfather was not a teetotaler—neither am I. However, I am convinced his record would be as clean as my own—for never having imbibed to the state of intoxication. He did have an elaborate wine cellar at Huntington. This, in the eyes of my good mother—bless her soul—was the work of the Devil.

My father, Samuel Hobart, died five months before I was born. Without having had the opportunity of placing my innocent childish clutches in the old gentleman's heart, he passed away when I was five, leaving me the munificent sum of one dollar.

A high-hatted, slick lawyer, by the name of Rock, settled with the estate for sizable sums, over a four year period, without my innocent mother being aware of the situation. While eventually, I had newspaper notoriety, when a judgment was secured against the lawyer and he was sent to jail—not even the dollar ever reached me or my mother.

There were others involved. Besides, I don't know the old gentleman's side of the triangle. He should not be condemned without a hearing. Despite the odious memories attached to my paternal side, at eight years of age, withstanding considerable pressure from those innocents surrounding me, I flatly refused to change my name to Charlie Bates.

The descendants of the three Atwater sisters, Mary, Lois, and Eliza, who married the three Womble brothers, are nine children, thirty grandchildren, and thirty-one great-grandchildren now living. All that are old enough are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, except Mary Elizabeth Womble, who joined the Methodist church in childhood, but after her marriage to Ellis McCargo, she joined the Baptist church with her husband. No one has ever been accused of crime; none of them are dissipated; none of them use profane language; none of them are wealthy; but all of them are honest, industrious, thrifty, Godfearing, law-abiding people, and have the respect and confidence of those with whom they live. The three Womble brothers were sons of Cornelius Womble, a farmer of Chatham county, North Carolina.

The deceased was eighty-seven years of age, and is survived by his wife, Mrs. Antoinette Respass Atwater; one son, Capt. James R. Atwater, and six daughters, Mrs. J. Henry Smith, of Griffin; Mrs. Fred Farris, of Atlanta; Mrs. George R. Turyin, of Macon; Mrs. William P. Leonard, of Talbotton; Mrs. Roland W. Spain, of New York city, and Mrs. A. J. King of Macon.

Besides being one of the oldest and wealthiest of Thomaston citizens, he was one of the most prominent, influential and highly esteemed. Not only did he stand high in the affection of his home people but wherever he was known men respected and loved him. A citizen of another city who is one of the most prominent men in the state and who was a business associate of Captain Atwater's said of him: "Few men have lived to better purpose, or have had higher regard of their friends and acquaintances than Mr. Atwater."

Captain Atwater was a man of strong convictions and once he took a stand in a matter he was almost unshakable. It is said of him that above all things he despised a hypocrite and hated all manner of shams. He was also a man who loved his friends and would stop at nothing to aid them. There are many who owe their business success to his assistance and counsel.

Captain Atwater served through the Civil War with distinction. He was noted for his bravery in battle and his efficiency in military tactics, being made captain of five different companies to perfect their organization. Many of his comrades who are still living gratefully bear testimony to his valorous record.

After the conflict ended he was active in the politics of Upson county serving as county commissioner for twelve years, during which terms of service he was one of the first men in the state to refuse a permit for a cross road saloon.

Captain Atwater was also one of the founders of the R. E. Lee Institute of Thomaston, and for twenty-three years acted as chairman for the board of trustees for that well known institution.

For years Captain Atwater was a leader in every movement looking to the upbuilding and betterment of his town and county.

C., where he was a farmer, and held the office of the justice of the peace. Answering the call of his country he served in the Confederate army as orderly sergeant and to the end of his life loved the comradeship of the "old veterans," often attending their reunions. After the war he moved to Chatham county where he spent the greater part of his life. He joined the Methodist church in early life at Cedar Grove. He was most loyal to his Lord and church; a strong, constant friend to ministers; called himself his pastor's assistant and it was true. He was far-seeing, clear cut in his processes of thought and of a philosophic turn of mind. One writer said of him: "I have always regarded Mr. Atwater as one of the most genuine Christians that I have ever known. He was ripe and ready for the garner. Doubtless he had his defects, but all in all, I have known very few men who stood out and above the multitude as distinctly for Christ as he did. The spiritual stream of his life ran smooth and deep, and he never allowed the straws that floated upon the surface to disturb the serenity of its depths."

2960. Martha V., dau. of Jehiel; m. Sept. 3, 1903, Rev. J. W. Jenkins of the North Carolina conference, M. E. church south. He d. July 4, 1906. She was educated in Greensboro Woman's College, Greensboro, N. C. Throughout her whole life there was an earnest desire to do some kind of mission work. Discouraged by her friends on account of her delicate health the idea and ambition still clung to her. She felt that she must do something in a worthwhile way, as she walked along life's road. When, without any effort on her part, she was elected as first matron of the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh,

N. C., she accepted, believing that her opportunity had come. Later, when she gave her hand in marriage to Rev. J. W. Jenkins, founder and superintendent of the orphanage, she knew that this was her life work, and together they worked with unceasing labor until, from a feeble beginning, the orphanage had grown into proportions that promised perpetuity. Then Mr. Jenkins laid down his beautiful life, and bound more closely than ever to the product of their united efforts, she has mothered the little orphan children who have been denied the love and care of fathers and mothers, and brought to them the light and joy of real home life.

Slight, small, frail in body, but great in soul, Mattie Atwater Jenkins has given her whole life for the happiness of others. With a sympathetic mind, a hand skilled in helpfulness, a heart that loves wisely, an unusual measure of ability in managing and controlling she has shared the hopes and heartaches of hundreds of boys and girls who delight to call her mother, and in whose lives "Miss Mattie" is a beacon light. She d. Oct. 28, 1925.

2961. James Bobbitt, son of Jehiel; m. Nov. 17, 1878, Nellie Eastwood Page. He is a farmer, merchant and cotton buyer. From childhood Mr. Atwater has been an indefatigable and conscientious worker. Handicapped by frail health in his early young manhood, he worked on amid difficulties. After taking a business course he became, when quite young, bookkeeper for the Odell Manufacturing Co. at his home. From that time on he has filled responsible positions in church, state and business, representing his county in the legislature and his church in every important position a layman can hold.

Mr. Atwater married Miss Nell Page, who comes of a distinguished and representative family. She is a cousin and foster sister of the ambassador, Hon. Walter Page. They have eight children, four of whom are living. The oldest son volunteered in the world war.

He received an academic education in county schools in Chatham, and took a business course at Eastman National Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Spent most of his life at Bynum, his present home, serving first the Bynum Manufacturing Co., cotton manufacturers, as bookkeeper, later bookkeeper and general manager, for the J. M. Odell Manufacturing Co., operating cotton mill and general store. Now engaged in mercantile business and operating roller mill and ginnery. In public matters he has served his county as county commissioner, member of board of education, representative in the state senate, member of the "Local Exemption Board" in 1917-18, and "Chairman of County Board of Equalization" under "New Valuation Act," 1919. In church relations he belongs to Southern Methodist church, serving as steward, trustee, district steward, Sunday School superintendent and member of North Carolina Conf. S. S. Board. Like most of his kinsmen, he also owns a farm and delights in agriculture, hog and cattle raising.

He was educated at the Thompson military school, Silver City, N. C., where he met his first wife. He settled on a farm, near his father's home in Chatham county, where he lived until the death of his wife. Leaving his children in the care of relatives he became traveling salesman for the Pomona Nursery of Greensboro, N. C. He canvassed Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Missouri, Louisiana and Arkansas and was very successful. After his second marriage he located in Lazoo City, Miss., but on account of the malarial condition, he returned to North Carolina. His father's death occurred two years before, so he bought the old homestead with two adjoining farms.
